The Fly Won Dancing Will Last A Gleam in the Dark Uncomfortable Corpse

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1920.)

At Butte, Montana, "Kid" Wiley, the human fly, climbed up the outside of the Hennessy Building, which is tall. At the same time Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for Vice-President, spoke on the grand and serious issues of of our day.

Fifteen hundred Americans watched the human fly climb, three or four hundred listened to Mr. Roosevelt speak, according to M. Buck's paper, the New Majority.

This teaches us that to attract the attention of the American citizen you must interest him. An amiable gentleman, in soft tones, telling people who can read plain English, that Article Ten does not mean war, can hardly expect to compete as an attraction with any human fly.

The Rev. Dr. Straton says prohibition should include dancing. "You cannot make a rattlesnake respectable." Dancing, he thinks, is immoral, therefore it's a rattlesnake.

Bert Saulsman of Washington, orchestra leader, says truly "dancing, particularly 'jazz,' expresses the intense explosive feeling of the human soul."

It does, indeed, also the animal soul. Birds sang and danced a million years before there were any human beings on earth. Half human beings, our ancestors, danced before they could talk. The jungle cock danced most gracefully to express his explosive soul in the mating season. The elephant and some of the monkeys dance occasionally.

Savages dance more violently than civilized men. If Dr. Straton could see the snake dance, eagle dance or deer dance among the Indians he would know that dancing is a safety valve, not a vice. "Let the poor people dance that they may forget their misery," said the good Abbe Fenelon, more than two hundred years ago. Let them dance now, that they may forget the H. C. L. and H-ll O-S.

With all the cheating, profiteering, striking, killing and foolishness, we are cheered by an occasional word telling of the real, steady progress that will end in civilization some day.

More important than all the bad news is Postmaster Burleson's statement that from now on flying machines will carry mails regularly across this continent from New York to San Francisco. That will save forty-two hours. When you save hours you add them to human life.

Paul Cravath, sufficiently intelligent to be adviser to some of the principal rulers of this country, says the peace terms granted to Germany must be revised and such terms arranged as will enable Germany to keep alive.

The government of this country went into a hashish dream just after the armstice and hasn't come out of it so that we are still "at war" with Germany. We shall not have much to say about revising the peace terms of Versailles.

The nations of Europe, however, will realize that the Asiatic criminal sentenced to live with the corpse of his victim fastened to his neck slowly decaying, did not lead a happy life. Germany is fastened to the neck of France, England and Italy, and cannot be cut loose. For their own comfort, those countries will decide not to let Germay decay.

It was a wise English king, quoted by Bonar Law, who said of his enemy, "He is determined to make himself a martyr and I am equally determined to prevent it."

MacSwiney had declared for the Republican army and declared himself at war against England, her King and government. Under the law could have been shot. Instead he is tried and sentenced as a political prisoner. By starving himself to death he is making himself a martyr, and the British government most stupidly allows him to do it. Half measures don't pay. Shoot your enemy, the world soon forgets it. Let him die slowly, for weeks, it may cost you your power.

Lloyd George says that if MacSwiney were released, all political prisoners must be released. It would be simple for the government to say to a political prisoner, "You are sentenced to so many months in jail. If you prefer three weeks with water, but no food, you may have what you prefer." That would settle the question.

England was wiser in the case of the suffragettes that started the self-starvation. Some were fed by force, others were set free.

SUSPECT HELD IN PROVIDENCI MURDER

PRISONER'S STORIES PROBED

Providence Police Investigating Statements of Suspect in Rose McKenna Murder

Providence, Sept. 7.—Harry C. Hathaway, alias E. C. Parsons, held in Fall River on a charge of illegally possessing a revolver, is regarded in the light of a suspect in connection with the murder of Miss Rose McKenna and the shooting of William J. Deignan last Wednesday night.

Parsons has told stories regarding his whereabouts on the night of the murder which do not agree.

The authorities say he corresponds in a general way to the slight description which Deignan was able to give of the slayer.

Deputy Chief Anthony of the East Providence department is in Lynn today attempting to reconcile some of the statements made by Hathaway, especially that which had to do with the disposition of his revolver.

Hathaway is about 24 years of age and his home is in South Dighton. He wasin the service. He had been posing about the freight yards in Fall River as a railroad detective when he was arrested.

WENT TO LYNN, HE SAYS.

It is definitely known that on the night before the murder Hathaway had a revover in his possession. When questioned regarding his movements on the day and night of the murder Hathaway insisted that on that day he had gone to Boston and then on to Lynn.

Regarding the revolver he claimed he gave it to the attendant in an all-night lunch cart in Lynn. Then he stated that he spent the night in

BIG VOTE BY BACK BAY WOMEN

Large Number of Colored Females Voters Appear at Ward 7 Polling Places

The largest outpouring of women voters in the Boston primaries today occurred in the Back Bay, where the proportion equalled that of the men.

Elsewhere in the city women were slow to exercise their recently acquired right to vote, with all balloting light during the early hours and one arrest reported for attempted illegal voting in Roxbury.

While enthusiasm was lacking as a whole, the women were on hand early at the Ward 7, Back Bay, polling booths, appearing both singly and in groups.

A considerable number of these women were colored, some elderly, and apparently had less difficulty in making out their ballots than their white sisters.

In Dorchester much indignation and some confusion was caused the voters both men and women, by the absence of stickers for James Jackson, candidate for the State treasurer nomination to succeed Fred J. Burrell, recently resigned.

Election officials, when asked for stickers, were forced to say they knew nothing about them, and could furnish the voters with no information.

In this district a few women made their appearance early at the voting booths, although greatly outnumbered by the men. The largest number of women appeared at Precinct 5, Ward 13, where about forty had cast their ballots by 9 o'clock.

Women were prominent at the various polling places, and in some cases were on over-seahoe in behalf of their favorite candidates that the police were forced to curb their enthusiasm.

Daniel G. Ruby, twenty-six years old, of No. 6 Arcadia street, Dorchester, was taken into custody by Parknasilla-by-the-Sea, County Kerry, Ireland, Sept. 7.—Whenever an irresistible government wishes a sentence of punishment, however trivial, on an individual, it also passes a sentence of death on him in event of his determination to die rather than submit to the punishment.

If this consideration did not exist governments could impose their wills on their subjects by simple reckless persecutions up to a point at which they could provoke spontaneous general revolution of the overwhelming majority of their subjects and they could prosecute the physically powerless minority without limit.

The hunger strike is a practical form of the determination to die rather than to submit to decreed punishment. The prudent govern-

LLOYD GEORGE RUSHES HOME

(BULLETIN)

Brixton Prison, London, Sept. 7 (9 A. M.)—Father Dominic, the personal spiritual advisor of Terence MacSwiney, emerging from the prison at this hour, after an all-night vigil with the dying Lord Mayor, said: "Lord Mayor MacSwiney is weaker. He is able to talk a little. He is suffering considerable pain about the legs, abdomen and heart."

More than a million women of all creeds prayed today for the release of Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork.

In the English speaking world alone nearly an 20,000 nuns offered prayer for his freedom, and there were some 100 organized communities in the eastern part of the United States and in Canada to "Our Lady of Perpetual Help."

Telegrams sent by mail and by wire to organized communities in all parts of the world have resulted in a unique novena for the release of the Lord Mayor. The idea originated in the Irish Presentation Convent of Dundalk, one of the oldest communities of women in the British Isles.

The novena began September 2 and will end September 11, exactly a month from the day that MacSwiney was imprisoned under arrest. From the convent in Dublin the movement for a universal novena spread until now it covers Europe at least 1,000 cloistered communities in all parts of the world.

6 BARRED DOORS GUARD MACSWINEY FROM OUTSIDE WORLD

JAILERS TRY TO SUPPRESS NEWS OF MAYOR'S CONDITION

British ministry over the government's policy toward MacSwiney and other matters led Premier Lloyd George to abandon his plan to stay in Switzerland until September 15, and to hurry home, it was learned today.

PREMIER CRITICIZED.

It is reported that some of the premier's colleagues criticized him for taking his vacation so far away from home in the face of the Irish crisis and the threatened national coal strike, which is scheduled to begin on September 25.

A dispatch from Dublin this afternoon said that Premier Lloyd-George's proposal for the conditional release of Irish hunger strikers had been "coldly received" there.

MacSwiney is sinking fast. He experienced so decided a sinking spell late yesterday afternoon that his wife, Mrs. Muriel MacSwiney, was hastily summoned to his bedside by the prison physicians.

The medical men informed her that he was at a point where the death of them at any time since his hunger strike started twenty-six days ago. He has not taken any nourishment since that time.

The streets around the prison are heavily policed. More police are arriving steadily by motor trucks. They are coming from all parts of London. Their patrol extends into the neighboring areas.

Each time a member of MacSwiney's family goes to or from the prison he or she passes through six barred doors that are unlocked one at a time.

Mrs. MacSwiney on emerging from the prison said:

"My husband is lying flat on his back. He is conscious at long intervals and is able to utter a distinct word. There are increasing signs of weakness but he is not in pain."

The members of the family are maintaining a constant vigil at his bedside. Father Dominic, the Lord Mayor's chaplain, is constantly in attendance.

Annie MacSwiney today stringently replied to the letter of Bonar Law. "Your letter," she wrote, "is an insult to freedom, honor, truth and to every democratic principle. Why do you call the Irish prisoners rebels? Rebels they desire freedom? You are causing the death of Terence MacSwiney and his comrades because they have a living belief that makes them die for the ideals you pretend you fought for."

The prison officials declined to give out any information concerning the striking Lord Mayor to the newspapermen. All information will have to be approved by the home office before it is given out.

It was said that the government plans to delay vital announcements, pending the strengthening of the defensive forces that are likely to be needed when the public is informed that the Irishman, a political prisoner, died of starvation in an English jail.

The full moral force of organized labor in Great Britain was placed behind the hunger-striking Mayor by the conference at Portsmouth of the Labor Congress, representing six and one-half million workers.

The congress passed a resolution reading, "We view with horror and indignation the decision to allow Lord Mayor MacSwiney to die. The whole of organized labor will hold the government responsible for the death. Such blind stupidity will render the reconciliation of England and Ireland almost impossible.

"We are doing everything possible to prevent the carrying out of the insane government policy toward MacSwiney," said J. H. Thomas, representing the railway men. He read the letter of Bonar Law saying the government is justified in its course because MacSwiney is a rebel. He then declared that Bonar Law more than any other man, justified the Ulster Rebellion in 1914. He added that none was published for this rebellion.

Sinn Fein Orders Cork Jail Doctor to Quit Erin

London, Sept. 7.—Sinn Fein has ordered the medical officer in the Cork prison to leave the country within twenty-four hours. They declared his presence legalized the slow murder of the hunger strikers in the Cork jail, now on their twenty-eighth day without food.

Dublin Castle issued a statement saying that the government rejected the advice of a medical officer that the prisoners be set free.

MacSwiney's Wife Thanks American Sympathizers

London, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Terence MacSwiney, wife of the hunger striking Lord Mayor of Cork, today sent a message of appreciation to the Sinn Fein sympathizers in the United States for their efforts to start an "economic boycott" against England.

"We appreciate and sympathize with the line of action taken in the economic boycott as shown by the withdrawal of policies from English insurance companies and the refusal to handle English shipping," says the message in part. "This is likely to bring home to the Lloyd George government what the Irish people throughout the world if my husband goes to his death in an English prison."

WOMEN ABSENT AT POLLS

Very Few Take Advantage of Franchise in Early Hours. Light Vote Being Cast

Inspector Kilday and Patrolman McCormick at the voting booth at King and Roxbury streets, Precinct 13, charged with attempted repeating.

Considerable interest was manifested in East Boston, where a fairly large number of men and women turned out in Wards 1 and 2 to register their votes in the Tague-Murley contest for Congress, which was the chief issue.

No disorders were reported from Charlestown in the morning voting in spite of the small, about as many voters turned out as last year, and there was a great sprinkling of women, about 100 voting up to 8:30 a. m. The women voters were expected in great force later in the day.

The biggest issue before Charlestown voters was the fight by Congressman Tague against seven other candidates, including Martin M. Lomasney's choice, Judge Joseph Murley, for Tague's seat in Congress.

The women, accompanied by their husbands, brothers and sweethearts, took much interest in them on how to mark their ballots, early in the polls. Senator John J. Kearney, who withdrew as a candidate following the endorsement of Judge Murley to succeed Congressman Tague by Martin Lomasney, was actively engaged in working for the judge today.

RAIN HOLDS OFF VOTE.

Elsewhere in the city there was little enthusiasm, the rain and lack of contests acting as deterrents to the voters, both male and female.

Although there was a three-cornered contest in South Boston where William J. Manning, Robert E. Bigney and William H. McDonnell, all members of the Legislature, were running for the Senate, the early vote was light.

There was also a contest between Senator William J. Foley and John J. Lydon for Governor's Council, to succeed with Lydon for the house in Wards 9, 10 and 11. Only a few women were in evidence, although it was expected their numbers will increase later in the day.

In Brookline, where 2,950 women were registered, the majority were conspicuous by their absence from the polling booths in the early hours. Included in the missing was Mrs. Gertrude B. Newell, a resident of the town now campaigning on Cape Cod. Mrs. Newell was so anxious to vote in the last presidential election she established a residence in Kansas, returning later to Brookline.

AGED WOMAN FAILS

Another absentee, through no fault of her own, was Miss Annie Stone, the 81 years old member of the family at the Mount Pleasant Home for Aged Men and Women on 82nd Hill avenue, Roxbury. Miss Stone was anxious to vote, but owing to the fact that she has been suffering from a bronchial affliction was not permitted. Many of the other 36 women registered at the Home took advantage of their rights, however.

There were few local contests, that between Dr. William H. Murphy against Robert Luce for Congress being the most important. Dr. Murphy was endorsed by the Massachusetts League of Women Voters.

Miss Alice E. Cram, candidate for State auditor on the Democratic ticket, voted at Willow and Washington streets, Jamaica Plain, in Precinct 4, Ward 22. Senator John Jackson Walsh, Democratic candidate for Governor, and his wife, left their home on Hyde Park avenue at 6 o'clock in order that they might vote early at the Francis Parkman School, Forest Hills. Mrs. Walsh was the first woman to vote in Precinct 9, Ward 22.

Voting in Ward 24 was about 20 per cent. larger than last year. Apparently the women voter waited until they had finished their morning housework before voting, as there were only about a dozen ballots cast by them in one precinct up to 8:30 a. m. In one precinct a man and woman were on hand at 6 o'clock to vote.

Veterans to Plan De Valera Parade

World War veterans will meet Thursday evening to arrange for a parade in honor of President and Mrs. De Valera of the Irish republic.

The meeting will take place in Deacon building, No. 1651 Washington street, at 8 o'clock, and former Sergeant-Major Daniel F. Heffernan of the 9th Machine Gun Battalion will preside.

BRITAIN SCORED BY SHAW

MacSwiney Sanctified by Lloyd George's Attitude, Says Author

ment will, therefore be most careful how it decrees any punishment, because in event of its victim hunger-striking it will be forced to either reduce itself and the law generally to absurdity by unconditional surrender or else go through with it and become responsible to the public conscience for the victim's death.

If the victim is a criminal who has incurred punishment by some crime which has excited general abhorrence, or even strong reprobation, the government may safely go through with it.

But this case does not arise in practice. Scoundrels do not hunger strike, neither do ruffians, although the latter may in rare cases resist capture by violence to death. When this happens the general verdict is "good riddance," and this would follow a hunger strike to death by an ordinary criminal.

ACCEPT LESSER EVIL.

Ordinary criminals know this very well and therefore, having to choose between a period of imprisonment and certain unpitied death, accept the lesser of two evils. That is why repeated surrender by the governments to hunger strikers have conferred an immunity upon ordinary crime and why thieves, homicides, forgers and incendiaries would even be pleased on serving their sentences hopelessly when they have seen the prisoner in the next cell released at the end of a fortnight's fast.

With the hunger strikers, therefore, it is always a case of conscience. He or she being willing to die not for himself or herself but for the principle or cause or religion which he or she has identified with the public good. He or she gives life that these things may live, and thus die as majorem gloriam Dei (to the greater glory of God).

It is a serious matter for the government to kill such a man even when his conscience seems silly and selfish, his principles fallacious, his cause subversive and his religion heretical.

GIVES HIM SANCTITY.

Still the fact that he is one of the few men who can rise above himself to the pitch of dying for them, gives him a sanctity that makes it impossible for the public to contemplate his death without great uneasiness or to feel satisfied with the government which has provoked the fatal contest, between law and conscience.

This may be unreasonable, but it has to be faced by the politicians, for cabinets cannot escape from the facts under the cover of syllogisms. It is fortiori if the principle is one of such wide acceptance that the government has done it loud lip service and even alleged it as the pretext for a colossal war and a cause widely popular in the government's demise. Thus, his death is likely to prove to be the doom of the government and may be obstinately but by no means undeservedly counted against them as an act of wilful murder as in form they morally compelled a suicide.

AN IGNORANT GOVERNMENT.

This is clearly the case of the Lord Mayor of Cork. Whether he is alive or dead I have no means of ascertaining as I write these lines. All I know is that the government has already gone further than it should have gone if it is not prepared to go to the end.

It is, however, such an extraordinary unintellectual and ignorant government, that it is not likely that it knows clearly what is going on; therefore the case may as well be stated clearly for it by some intelligent persons.

I may add, in order that my personal bias may be allowed for, that I am against all strikes that recoil on the striker instead of falling on his adversary, and that I wish I could persuade the Lord Mayor to eat a hearty dinner and leave the silly government to the anarchy from which his improvised court, which is well spoken of and appealed to by the rest of the people, rescued it. (Note—Shaw refers to the courts of the Irish republic, which have practically supplanted the British courts in many parts of Ireland.)

But if Mr. Lloyd George really wishes to make a martyr of the Lord Mayor, I wouldn't be in Lloyd George's shoes for a good deal.

The Lord Mayor is the sort of martyr who burns with a very bright, very fierce flame.

INSANE CONVICT FLEES JAIL AND ENDS LIFE

Bangor, Me., Sept. 7.—Perry Dumont escaped from the State Insane Hospital, outdistanced the guards and committed suicide by jumping into a river. Dumont was forty-five years old. He was committed to the hospital eighteen months ago from Lynn. Then he stated that he spent the night in Lynn. To offset this claim the authorities have the register at the Y. M. C. A. in Fall River. The book shows that on the night of September 1 "E. C. Parsins" had registered there and spent the night.

Both Chief Adams and Deputy Chief Anthony are investigating Hathaway's story. They are being aided by officers of the Fall River and Lynn departments.

Chief Adams declared today that he didn't believe the river pirate theory was a sound one. The identity of the men who were in boats along the river on the night of the murder is known to him. One of them was doing some repair work on a oysterboat while the other is an eel fishermen.

HEARD FATAL SHOTS.

They both reported to Chief Adams that they heard the shots, then saw the lights flash up in the automobile which was backing around and onto the road. They did not believe that anything serious had occurred, both reported.

Chief Adams announced today that the first persons who had been Dejoan after the shooting were Miss Mae Murphy of No. 882 Eddy street, this city, and Fred A. Rix of No. 229 Washington street, Providence. They were driving along the Barrington Parkway when they decided to stop near the plant of the Gulf Refining Company.

They had been there but a few minutes when an automobile drove up behind them. They heard the brakes being put on and then heard a man cry: "Help! Help! I'm shot." They at once drove on and to the center of East Providence, where they secured police assistance and returned to the place where they had left the car.

Neither say anything of the murderer. Nor did they see afterward, in fact anyone else whom the police have questioned save Denigan. Denigan is conscious at the Rhode Island Hospital but hasn't been able to help the officers any further.

JAPAN SEIZES TURTLE ISLAND

Important Strategic Point Off Pacific Coast Fortified by Mikado's Forces

Washington, Sept. 7.—The astonishing charge that Japan has openly and flagrantly violated the Monroe Doctrine by establishing a fortified base on Turtle Island, in Magdalena Bay, in Lower California, is made by Representative Schall of Minnesota. It has been laid before officials of this government.

If the Department of State does not take immediate and effective action, asserts Mr. Schall, he will place the matter before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs as soon as Congress convenes and demand quick and drastic action.

Turtle Island is only 1,100 miles from San Francisco, 900 miles from Mexico City, 200 miles from the extremity of Lower California and 3,310 miles from the Panama Canal. It occupies a position of strategic value, particularly for operation against the Panama Canal and the United States.

During the latter part of the Taft administration Japan obtained a fishing concession on Turtle Island from Mexico. The United States made no objection. Instead of developing a fishing station it now appears, according to Mr. Schall, that Japan has taken advantage of American preoccupation in the war to develop a powerful coaling and fortified naval base.

"I have a letter from a wealthy and influential friend, long a resident of Mexico," said Mr. Schall, "which provides complete substantiation of the charge. He was on a boat, he wrote, which tried to land at Turtle Island. It was met by a Japanese destroyer on patrol duty and compelled to put back to sea.

ISLAND HEAVILY FORTIFIED.

"My friend was close enough to Turtle Island to see that it was heavily fortified and that it contained a great quantity of coal. At the next port he was informed that only British in addition to Japanese ships were permitted to reach Turtle Island and that they must be equipped with proper authority.

"I will make known the identity of my correspondent at the proper time. If I were to give his name now it would only invite disaster to him. He has large interests in Mexico.

12 Irishmen Rout 500 Scots at Picnic

New York, Sept. 7.—Celtic Park is in Long Island City. It has long been considered the private stamping ground of the Irish athletes and merrymakers of Greater New York.

The sixty-ninth annual games and picnic of the Caledonian Club was advertised to take place in Celtic Park yesterday. There were only twelve objectors, but they came early, remained late and at one time had twelve battles under way in various parts of the grounds.

When darkness fell and one could no longer dodge "Irish confetti" the police were called in and six of the twelve disturbers were locked up on charges of disorderly conduct and intoxication. The five hundred Scots who attended the games intimated that the "seventieth annual" will be held somewhere else.

LLOYD GEORGE PUTS ON ARMOR

Leaves Lucerne for London Closely Guarded by Army of Police and Soldiers

London, Sept. 7.—Heavily guarded, Premier Lloyd George has left Lucerne for London, says a Geneva dispatch to the London Daily Express. The Premier climbed the Alps at Eermatt.

The Premier is wearing a suit of mail similar to he one worn by Eleutherios Venizelos, the Greek Premier, and which saved the latter's life when he was shot at the Gare de Lyon, Paris.

Paris, Sept. 7.—An army of international secret police is taking the most extraordinary precautions to prevent attacks on Premier Lloyd George as he is en-route from Lucerne through France to a port from which he will take a boat to England.

Two pilot trains are preceding the special train on which the Premier is riding. Detachments of police guard every important station. A large guard of soldiers and police is stationed at every stop. A special train carrying fifty armed guards follows the special on which the Premier is riding.

NEPHEW RISKS LOSS OF $250,000 IN CONTESTING SEARLES' WILL

SENSATION PROMISED IN FIGHT

Disclosures of Startling Nature Awaited in Essex County Court

Developments of a sensational nature are expected if Albert Victor Searles of Boston decides to contest the will of his late uncle, Edward F. Searles, the multi-millionaire of Methuen, who died last July.

Returns were due to be filed today in Essex County Court at Salem, and the nephew has signified his intention of filing a complaint to the terms of the will.

Whether he will fight the will on the grounds that he has been treated illegally in being left only $250,000 out of an estate estimated at between $15,000,000 and $25,000,000 was a question to be decided today.

Counsel for the nephew declined to state beforehand whether their client would take action. There is a provision in the will that whoever resorts to court action to break the terms of the will shall automatically lose his share of the will as provided.

Should the fight be taken up as proposed it is expected there will be startling disclosures on the extraordinary methods of the late millionaire patron. There are many strange features to the case and principals in both to state their positions.

Arthur T. Walker of New York, private secretary and confidant to the recluse, has been left the bulk of the estate. He declines to discuss the matter in any detail. Louis D. Delafield, a New York lawyer, is one of the executors of the will.

The case took on a mysterious turn with the sudden disappearance of Angelo Milton Ellison, a former bellboy, whom the elder Searles took a liking to and provided with the luxury his millions could buy. Ellison is of Italian descent and speaks broken English.

He left the suite of rooms he was occupying at the Murray Hill Hotel in New York a week ago that he was mail be forwarded to Methuen. But inquiry at Methuen failed to reveal his being there. It is believed that Ellison is hiding and does not want to tell what he knows about the strange will and his dealings with Searles.

First estimates were that the estate was valued at around $50,000,000, but now persons in close touch with the case declare that it has shrunk to between $15,000,000 and $25,000,000. Just what has become of the many millions now missing will be one of the interesting questions to be answered in the case.

SOMERVILLE DEDICATES $4,000 SOLDIERS' SHRINE

More than 2,000 persons attended the dedication of a memorial shaft in Union square, Somerville, erected from contributions obtained by the Somerville welcome home committee in memory of 800 veterans of the World War from Ward 2, Somerville. The shaft is four feet in height and cost in the vicinity of $4,000. The memorial was unveiled by Mrs. A. E. Heimann, mother of Charles F. Heimann, who died in France.

FIREMEN AID IN RESCUE OF 8 DRIFTING IN LAUNCH

Marblehead, Sept. 7.—The fire department and life guards assisted in the rescue of eight Rockport people who drifted several hours in the harbor when the power boat in which they were passengers was disabled off Gustins Rock. The injured are Mr. and Mrs. William Dorgan, Miss Mary E. Berry and Miss Margaret Conway, all of No. 153 Hampshire street, Cambridge, and Edward J. Gleason of No. 50 Eaton street, Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Dorgan have fractures of the skull. It is feared Mrs. Dorgan will not recover.

STORE BANDIT FLEES WHEN DEFIED TO FIRE

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 7.—When John Grenier, seventeen, of No. 193 East street, Sayleville, pointed a gun at the head of Harry Asquith, who kept a store at No. 1523 Smithfield avenue, and demanded that he hand over the contents of the cash drawer, Asquith replied, "Go ahead; fire away." The youth then ran from the store and was captured about an hour later on Lucas street, Lincoln, after he had been pursued by a large crowd. On his pocket was found a loaded revolver.

U. S. Refuses to Ban Wicked City

Washington, Sept. 7.—No matter how wicked a foreign city may be it is not the business of the United States Government to act as a censor for morals or to refuse permission for American citizens to visit that place.

Secretary Colby has made this ruling in reply to a letter from the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Church which is conducting a nation-wide crusade against Tia Juana, a resort over the California line in Mexico.

In a circular which it has given nation-wide distribution, the Methodist board describes Tia Juana as "a city of prostitution and gambling, run by Americans and supported by Americans."

5 MILLS REOPEN IN LAWRENCE

24,000 Operatives in Cotton Factories End Vacation; Woolen Mills Start Next Week

Lawrence, Sept. 4.—Conditions in Lawrence returned quickly to their normalcy today when a ten-day vacation in the cotton mills came to an end and 24,000 operatives returned to work in the Pacific, Arlington, Everett, Duck, Pemberton and smaller mills.

The four big plants of the American Woolen Company shut down since July, will reopen in part on Monday of next week, when 5,000 of 10,000 workers will go back. The others will follow as conditions continue to improve.

William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, declined today to discuss the business situation with reporters and intimated that hereafter when he has anything to say it will be given to the newspapers in typewritten form. "In the past," Mr. Wood said, "what I have said has been so twisted about that I have got into trouble. I am going to be more cautious."

Salem Shoe Workers Back on Job Today

Salem, Sept. 7.—Twenty of the twenty-two shoe factories in Salem, Danvers, Peabody and Beverly resumed operations today. The beginning departments, after a shut-down of eleven weeks. About 5,000 employes are affected by the re-opening. The factories closed when the ways of cancellation of war orders struck the industry this Summer. There was also a labor grievance, the employes wanting the bonus paid during the three months ending June 21 continued. That demand was waived.

COX WANTS TO CURB HOARDERS

Says Cold Storage Manipulation Nullifies Law of Supply and Demand

By International News Service.

Grand Fork, N. D., Sept 7.—Governor James M. Cox entered North Dakota today, determined to law of curbing the use of Roosevelt methods, unmindful of charges that he is conducting an undignified campaign. He is going to reiterate the story of his fight in Ohio for constitutional reform in which he says he, as the leader of the progressive element, was opposed at every turn by Warren G. Harding.

Taking advantage of the failure of the Republican Congress to act on the cold storage regulation, Governor Cox was prepared to direct attention of the food producing sections of the Northwest to the need of such a law and to the antagonism of the forces of reaction in the Senate to its passage.

He believes that manipulation of cold storage facilities by profiteers in food stuffs nullifies the law of supply and demand and operates to the disadvantage of both producer and consumer.

North Dakota is the home of Senator Gronna, who made a vain fight to obtain consideration of a bill by which the meat packing industry would be under federal supervision and the "Big five" packers shut away from control of the stock yards and refrigerator car services.

Another response to his declarations in St. Paul in favor of self determination for subject peoples and Irish aspirations and his promise that the cause of Ireland would be aided through the broad guarantees of article 11 of the League of Nations covenant, encouraged Governor Cox to a restatement of that principle in his speeches here.

S-5 COMMANDER ADMITS FAILURE TO CLOSE VALVE

Philadelphia, Sept. 7.—Lieutenant-Commander Cooke of the submarine S-5, testifying before the board of inquiry aboard the battleship Ohio, declared that he failed to close the main sea valve which was responsible for the sinking of the craft last week.

IRISH FRIENDS VOTE SUPPORT TO STRIKERS

Thomas McDonagh Branch, Friends of Irish Freedom, pledged financial and moral support to the striking longshoremen and voted unanimously to oppose any candidate who favors the League of Nations. Charles M. Roberts of the Triple Alliance of Labor, England, was the principal speaker, and John J. Concannon presided.

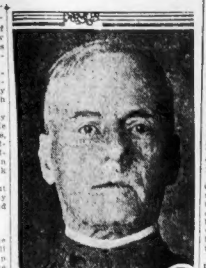
Army Man, Daddy of 9 Finds Landlords Shy

There will be no divorce in America, in the opinion of Colonel Archibald Campbell, U. S. A., adjutant of the First Army Corps Area (New England), when all married couples in the land fill their homes with children.

Big families, moreover, in the opinion of the same gentleman, will banish the American race unless drive away dull care and hand old Mr. Grouch his hat and show him the door.

Colonel Campbell did not say any of these things in just this way. He isn't "laying down the law" he says, to anybody. The daddy of nine children, he was discussing the difficulties that beset the new arrival in Boston who marches forth to seek shelter for his brood.

Two of the Campbell nine are "out in the world," two more are away at school; five are with father and mother.



COL. ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, Who says big families will banish divorce.

"WORTH $5,500,000."

"I read somewhere in a magazine some years ago," Colonel Campbell said, "of a father who, summing up his assets, said he was worth three million dollars. From that detail he declared that a good wife is worth at least $1,000,000, and that any child in America—with all that Life wails. Just around the corner to offer him is cheap at $500,000.

"The only thing I question about that story are the figures. They are too low. But accepting them as they stand I find that I am worth $4½ millions and a half."

The birthplace of the Campbell children tell the story of the nomadic life of an army officer. Three were born in California, one in Texas, one in Washington, one on Long Island, one in Honolulu, and two in Georgia. Their ages? Mary is a year and a half old. Archibald, twenty-three, served overseas in the 6th Cavalry. Elisabeth Norris, twenty-one, was an army nurse during the war.

"Rather upsetting, being knocked about as we have been," the colonel said, "but always interesting and, on the whole, improving."

HIS "UNIVERSITY."

"Mother calls the children her 'jewels'. I look upon them as my university. Never a day passes when I do not learn from them.

"I don't know how other men feel about it, but if I should step within my own doors and not hear the children or see playthings strewn about I believe I should have the creeps.

"No grouch can survive in a home blessed by little children. And youth? You may take it from me, fellows, old Ponce de Leon was thwarted. He should have remained in Spain or Portugal, picked out the right girl and surrounded himself with youngsters. I am twenty years younger than any unmarried man in the United States and I owe it to the young Campbells."

Not Colonel Campbell cannot account for his prejudice against childhood which appears to fill the breasts of landlords. They appear to be gun shy of the daddy of a large brood. Sometimes, the colonel says, almost even as if the mumps has a landlord's house strikes up the "Campbells Are Coming, Eleven Strong" when he is still blocks distant from a desirable house.

WILSON'S YACHT FOR BRITONS

Mayflower Is at Disposal of Sulgrave Leaders Coming for Tercentenary

Washington, Sept. 7.—The presidential yacht Mayflower will be placed at the disposal of Lord Rathcreedan and his associates on the British delegation when they arrive September 18, to take part in the tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims.

The visitors represent the British branch of the Pilgrim Institution and the Anglo-American Society. They will come to Washington on October 2, and will visit Mount Vernon.

Accompanied by officials from the Canadian and Netherlands governments, the British delegation will go to Jamestown aboard the Mayflower on October 4 to take part in celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the first American Legislative Assembly. Later they will go to Richmond.

Lord Rathcreedan will be accompanied by H. G. Wells, the novelist; the Rev. Dr. Inge, dean of Christ's Church and vice-chancellor of Cambridge University; Professor Foakes Jackson, Jesus College, Cambridge; Admiral Sir Lawther Grant, Sir John A. Cockburn, ex-Premier of South Australia; Sir Arthur Herbert, J. B. Macafee, banker and chairman of the American Luncheon Club in London; Sir John Henry, Colonel Edwards of the Royal Warwickshire Regiment, Stanley Unde of the Anglo-American Society and H. S. Persis, chairman of the British Sulgrave Institution which has charge of George Washington's ancestral home at Sulgrave manor.

LAKE FREIGHTERS WILL TRANSPORT MUCH GRAIN

Chicago, Sept. 7.—The lake route to the East is to be used to its full capacity for the shipment of grain this year, according to members of the Chicago Board of Trade and Chairman Clark of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Chairman Clark recently announced that such ships are being put in use.

According to figures available in Chicago there is enough tonnage on the Great Lakes to move 125,000,000 bushels of grain on one trip. The tonnage was greatly increased during the war period. From 1916 to 1918 inclusive twenty-seven boats were built in Chicago with a gross tonnage average of 2,489 tons.

Despite transportation handicaps, which have been the cause of considerable uneasiness, grain and transportation experts believe the movement of the crops and the distribution of the big grain crops will be worked out without any serious results. The stabilizing effect on prices resulting from the resumption of dealing in wheat for future delivery has been of great economic value to the country in general, according to students of agricultural economics.

ARLINGTON PRIEST LEAVES FOR CHINA

One of the six young Catholic foreign missionaries who left New York today for the mission field in China, is the Rev. George F. Wiseman of Arlington. Fr. Wiseman was born in Cambridge and attended the Cambridge schools, graduating from the Cambridge Latin School in 1911. He received his degree from Boston College in 1916 and made his theological studies at Maryknoll, the seminary of the Foreign Mission Society of America at Ossining-on-the-Hudson, N. Y. He was ordained to the priesthood by the most Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, archbishop of New York.

24 FAMILIES FLEE FIRE IN CAMBRIDGE

Twenty-four families, occupants of an apartment block at No. 84 Norfolk street, Cambridge, were driven to the street scantily attired early today when fire of unknown origin destroyed the upper story of the building.

Two alarms were sounded when the flames threatened to spread to adjoining houses.

The building is owned by the Hennley Court Trust, of which Georg A. Giles of Cambridge is agent, and is valued at $250,000.

Foch Explains Foe's Defeat at Marne

Paris, Sept. 7.—Marshal Foch, generalissimo of the Allied forces, for the first time explained the first German defeat on the Marne. He commanded the centre of the French army in that engagement.

The German defeat on the Marne, he said, was unquestionably due to the collapse of the German general staff plan, due to the German generals, each of whom was eager to win the war on his own account.

"The advance of Von Kluck was the most stupifying in history, but, instead of by the Allies reaching Paris, he forgot to protect his flanks against the attack by General Gallieni. Meanwhile the German general headquarters was calling to save the situation, because it remained at Luxemburg, far from the scene of the fighting."

All Europe Looking for Airplane Thief

Paris, Sept. 7.—Every aerodrome in Europe is on the lookout for an English aviator who disappeared from the Pau aerodrome with a Morane "parasol" airplane.

At last reports the "air thief" was reported to be heading toward Spain, from the top of which a newly arrived Monsieur Dumesnil, who is now an hour as the Morane flies from Pau.

This is the first recorded theft of an airplane in Europe, but not the first in the world, for ten years ago a daring burglar succeeded in getting away with one of the Wrights' experimental planes from Dayton, O. He was captured.

U. S. Has Butter for Its Own Bread

Washington, Sept. 7.—The United States is literally buttering its own bread in spite of claims by any other nation, according to the Department of Agriculture.

Numerous references to importations of butter from this mark, Holland and other countries have caused many persons to believe that we depend upon foreign countries. This is very far from the truth," says a bulletin issued today. "We export more butter than we import.

The average annual exportation on record was for 1919, when it reached only 2,519,368 pounds. The imports for the same year were 24,516,455 pounds, a net export of 25,057,117 pounds."

Mildred Preuss, aged eleven, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Preuss, No. 89 Wachusett street, Jamaica Plain, has just been brought back to her home in Boston, after seven years in Russia. She left here last two years among strangers and arrived destitute. Penniless by washing dishes, sweeping floors and gathering eggs.

For three years her parents have striven to have the girl returned to America. Vain efforts were made through the Red Cross and the State Department at Washington. Finally Mrs. Preuss journeyed to Goldingen, a thirty-miles from Libau, in Russia, and got her daughter.

The little girl, who has never been to school, has acquired reports of war. She was ill Goldingen when the Germans captured that town from the Russians, and lived in it under Bolshevist rule.

PONZI AGENT IS THREATENED

Receivers to Force Dondero to Open His Vault in Hanover Trust Company

Charles Ponzi will personally assist the auditors for the receivers in straightening out the maze of his transactions, and today was to have worked with the accountants at the office of Charles F. Hittenhouse & Company at No. 89 State street, in compliance with the agreement to increase the assets.

It was learned today that an effort will be made by the receivers to secure access to the safe deposit vault in the Hanover Trust Company of John E. Dondero, Ponzi's former agent and partner. If Dondero refuses the officials permission to open the vault it is understood they will appeal to the court for an order forcing the depositary to turn over the key of the depository over to them.

The first bankruptcy hearing to grow out of the financial collapse of Charles Ponzi will be held before Referee Cunniff on next afternoon at 2.

This hearing is entirely apart from the preceding before the referees, and is granted at the request of Horbitt & Wasserman, counsel for the one hundred members of the Ponzi Creditors' Protective Association.

Miss Hilda M. Reed, Ponzi's secretary, and John Dondero, alleged financial adviser, will be questioned at length at this hearing. Both of which is only an hour as the Morane flies from Pau.

This is the first recorded theft of an airplane in Europe, but not the first in the world, for ten years ago a daring burglar succeeded in getting away with one of the Wrights' experimental planes from Dayton, O. He was captured.

Woman's Premonition Saves Sister's Life

Boston members of the Psychical Research Society and scores of others interested in the occult, today expressed the hope that a scientific investigation might be made of the "premonition" which last night led Mrs. Annie McGonigle all the way from her home at No. 74 Carver street, South End, to the room of Mary Talbot, eighteen, her sister, at No. 130 Wordsworth street, East Boston. She arrived in time to save the girl from death by gas.

Mrs. McGonigle is sure the message came from her sister's guardian angel.

"All through the afternoon," she said today, "the thought was in my mind that everything was not well with Mary. When darkness came and I had received no word from her the thought was overpowering. I hurried to East Boston, and, finding her house in darkness, looked for a policeman.

"Then came doubts to harass me. 'You fool,' something said, 'the policeman will only laugh at you. There is nobody at home. Mary will be angry.'

"Nevertheless, I told the officer my story and he decided to force the front door.

"My sister was lying on her bed unconscious. Gas was filling the room from a defect in the piping. The officer called an ambulance and Mary was hurried to East Boston Relief Hospital."

After physicians had worked over her for an hour Miss Talbot was able to go home with her sister.

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 7.—Increased violence marked the ninth day of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit strike. The worst disorder occurred when about fifteen men, in two automobiles, opened fire upon the men's club rooms at the East New York car barns, where about 500 strikebreakers are quartered.

The attackers, the police say, were armed with automatic pistols equipped with silencers.

Police reserves were rushed to the scene and the attackers fled, firing seven thirty rifles mounted on automobiles and gave chase and a thrilling running fight developed. About twenty shots were fired, but so far as known no one was wounded. The attackers escaped.

Small bands of striking motormen harassed the company by tampering with switches, greasing rails and cutting trolley wires.

LABOR PASSES ERIN RESOLVE

Holiday Celebration Takes the Form of Mass Meeting on Boston Common

Supplanting the parade which had been cancelled by the Boston Central Labor Union, this city's labor celebration was marked by the holding of a mass meeting on the Common. Acting Mayor James T. Moriarity was the principal speaker and W. A. McDonald, president of the New England Metal Trades Council was chairman.

A group of women pickets, who had prevailed upon longshoremen not to handle British freight, marched onto the Parkman band stand carrying Irish banners. McDonald declared that the A. F. of L. would aid Ireland's sons in their fight for freedom and was vigorously applauded.

Resolutions presented by Mrs. Nora Mitchell demanding the withdrawal of the British troops from Erin, the restoration of civil liberties and a resolve condemning the treatment of Mayor MacSwiney, were passed, and it was ordered that copies be sent to Lloyd George, President Wilson, Secretary Colby and President De Valera.

Acting Mayor Moriarity denounced the Chamber of Commerce and asserted that the American Federation of Labor was the only organization in World War which considered "America First" and wages and working conditions last.

Fifty colored strike-breakers, who were employed to take the place of union employes at the Cambridge Gas & Electric Light Company, paraded onto the platform carrying banners. They have quit work and joined with the union strikers.

ENGLISH LABOR CRISIS FEARED

Industrial Trouble Expected When Decrease of Wages Is Begun

Washington, Sept. 7.—Industrial conditions in England are uncertain, according to advices received by the Commerce Department.

The British manufacturing plants, specially textiles and clothing manufactories, are facing a situation of curtailed orders, and in many instances labor conditions threaten.

While present production has been fairly well maintained, "some anxiety is felt for the future," the report declares. High wages are prevailing and a general decrease in prices is expected. With the decreased prices a fall in labor wages is predicted. That labor troubles will result if wages are lowered is predicted.

One report from Blackburn shows that the market for cotton goods produced there has fallen off. Much of the output was shipped to China and India. The natives have been unable to keep abreast with the increased prices, it is reported. Going into this subject Alfred Gutting, attache of the American Consul-General's office, says:

"Wages in the spinning industry are very high, and, although this may be justifiable while the big profits are being made, a return to more normal conditions will make the relations between capital and labor difficult."

DeVALLES COUNCIL K. OF C., WILL ELECT TONIGHT

Father John B. DeValles Council, K. of C., will elect officers this evening at the Columbus Club, Dorchester. Robert J. Kane will be elected grand knight without a contest. There are warm contests for other offices. Recorder Charles Carr and Treasurer William F. Tilley are unopposed.

Old Time Bike Riders Feature of Run

Indorsement of the Boston American's big bicycle run next Sunday afternoon from Copley square to Chestnut Hill Reservoir was voiced by Abbot Bassett of Newton Centre, life secretary of the League of American Wheelmen.

"I think it is a fine idea to get all the old-time riders out for a big reunion together with the boys and girls of today," said Bassett to the bicycle editor in discussing the proposed outing. "I will make a strong effort to be there."

Many of the well known cyclists who will participate in the "Wheel Around the Hub" each year have signified their intention of taking part in the American's run. Hundreds of young boys and girls have written to the bicycle editor, telling him that they will be on hand Sunday to pedal the six miles. Their mothers and fathers gave permission after learning that no racing will be permitted and that the cyclists will be accompanied all the way by motorcycle policemen.

A big delegation will be on hand, headed by John F. McDonald. "Each rider will wear an arm band with 'South Boston' printed on it. One of the group will carry a large pennant bearing the same lettering.

SLIGHT CHANGE IN ROUTE

Some of the old-time riders who went to Chestnut Hill reservoir every Sunday for an outing when cycling was at its zenith have asked if they may wear their medals and pins of former days. The bicycle editor has no objection to this, in fact he thinks it is a good idea. If any rider has an old-time cycling suit that still fits, let him wear it. A few who will ride their high steeds of the vintage of 1895 are planning to attend the run attired in tight-fitting garments such as were common 25 years ago to followers of cycling.

An effort to keep all the cyclists from a particular district together during the run will be made. Space is to be assigned each section at Copley square, from where the start will be made at three o'clock. Riders may find their correct place by consulting the signs which will stand in the square.

To make it easier for the little boys and girls and for the old timers, a slight change in the route previously announced has been made. Instead of going along Chestnut Hill avenue the cyclists will pass directly to the rendezvous beside the reservoir, from Beacon street.

Director Fred St. Onge of the Boston American's bicycle run to Chestnut Hill reservoir next Sunday in the accompanying illustration shows how to pick an object from the road. How often has a rider desired to pick up an object without dismounting? It's easily done when you know how. Here's how—ride close to the object with pedals at dead center—or with the cranks up and down. Lean over side of bicycle holding the handle bar with one hand and grasping the object with the other.

VOCALISTS TO ENTERTAIN

Arrangements are now under way to secure the services of some high-grade vocalists to entertain the assembled throng. As previously announced, St. Onge is to give an exhibition of the "stunts" that made him known throughout the world as a high-class performer.

The presentation of six high-grade bicycles to those who show the best riding form en route and also for the best exhibition of trick riding at the reservoir is expected to be witnessed by several thousand people. Five of the bicycles are to be given for those who ride most correctly. One will be given to the boy or girl who gives the best exhibition of trick riding.

John Semple, Jr., aged fifty-eight, of No. 393 Washington street, charter member of Boston Rambler Bicycle Club, has written that he'll be there. He's going to have his club pin on his cap.

Louis Silverstein, sixteen, of No. 78 Second street, Chelsea, of the Walnut Boys' Club, has entered the names of several members for the ride. "We have a bicycle club," he writes, "and would like to join in the run." He registered the names of Nathan Levine, No. 73 Walnut street; Peter Shuman, No. 14 Walnut street; Israel Silverstein, No. 78 Second street; Max Schultz, No. 117 Williams street; Philip Chouin, No. 227 Chestnut street; Morris Ganze, No. 94 Auburn street; Frank Rosseti, No. 230 Second street, and Hyman Schwartz, No. 70 Second street.

WOMEN OPPOSE LEAGUE PERILS

American Interests Must Be Safeguarded First, Says Miss King, National Leader

Washington, Sept. 7.—Women are opposed to any further association with the troubles in Europe and can be counted upon to vote against the League of Nations unless the interests of the United States are properly safeguarded, according to Miss Florence King, of Chicago, president of the National Woman's Association of Commerce. A statement from her has just been made public by the National Welfare Union here.

Miss King is the only woman attorney who has ever won a case before the Supreme Court of the United States.

"Business and professional women are giving more serious consideration to the national campaign than they have ever done before," says Miss King.

"That the League of Nations is a square issue no one can doubt. Why vote for Harding? Because the slogan, 'He kept us out of war' elected a Democratic President four years ago.

"The League of Nations was designed to end all future wars, and it is now in operation. The horrifying conditions between Russia and Poland is the best demonstration of the practical operation. But what American wants to take part in that conflict?

"If the United States cannot join the League of Nations without being subject to the exigencies of the war as demanded by the present league, we should stay out of it.

"Our forefathers paid too dear a price for us to enter into an international agreement without our rights, sovereignty or self-determination left for us."

WANTS OFFICIALS WHO WILL AID THE MASSES

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 7.—Advocating the election of officials pledged to work for the masses, Frank H. McCarthy, general labor organizer of Boston, addressed a large gathering under the auspices of the Central Trades and Labor Union in Times square. Prior to the meeting a big parade of labor men was held in this city and Central Falls.

OLD NEW HAVEN ROAD BRIDGE ENGINEER DIES

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 7.—William Harley Moore, chief bridge engineer for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and for forty years in the employ of that company, died suddenly at his home here, aged sixty. The body was sent to Wareham, Mass., where a service will be held today.

Wall Street too Much for Christensen

New York, Sept. 7.—Parley P. Christensen, candidate for President on the Farmer-Labor ticket, is in New York.

"I came to take a good look at the government of the United States, which is located in Wall Street," he said, "with the real White House, as I understand it, on the corner of Broad and Wall streets, inhabitated by President J. Pierpont Morgan and Vice-President Henry P. Davison.

"It was my intention originally to make a few speeches down there, preferably on that Broad and Wall street corner, suggesting that it is about time to move the government of the United States from Wall street to Washington, where it is supposed to reside.

"But I have decided that talking on Wall street in the interest of the average man would be too much like whispering in the Cave of the Winds at Niagara Falls.

WILL TAKE A LOOK.

"I am going down there to look, then I will go to other parts of the United States to talk and tell what is to be seen in the financial Pergola where the United States is governed."

Mr. Christensen doesn't think much of either of the big parties, and says so. He thinks that Harding will be elected because, he says, the West is against the League of Nations and knows perfectly well that the League of Nations means sending the United States to war whenever a group of foreign nations and American bankers decide that it is desirable.

About politics Mr. Christensen said: "South Dakota will go for the Farmer-Labor party. I am not guessing. I know it, because I have been all over South Dakota. North Dakota will give us a big vote, so will Nebraska. Minnesota will go, I think, for the Farmer-Labor party. Here in New York, where everybody is supposed to be sewed up, tied and labelled, we shall get a vote that will surprise some of the old labels.

MAY GO TO HOUSE.

"I think it very likely this election will be thrown into the House of Representatives.

"After I have looked around New York and Wall street for a day or two I am going West again, and am going to write as well as tell what I see down there in Wall street, where they tell Congress what kind of laws to make and the courts what kind to break."

Christensen used to be a Republican when he was prosecuting attorney in Utah. He got himself disliked by actually enforcing the laws that limited work in the mines to eight hours a day. Then he got into politics.

ROCKS KILL 3 AT NIAGARA

Two Others, Viewing Falls, Seriously Hurt When Five Tons Drop on Cave Bridge

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Dropping 150 feet from the brink of Horseshoe Falls onto the bridge leading to the Cave of the Winds, five tons of shale killed three persons and seriously injured two others, who were crossing the bridge. A sixth occupant of the bridge escaped uninjured.

Mrs. Frank Herling of Detroit was walking within a few feet of her husband when the mass of debris struck the bridge. She saw her husband disappear before her eyes, but escaped injury, although rocks splintered and fell all about her.

Erosion is the only explanation of the accident, which the authorities at the falls advance.

HARDING ON HIS WAY TO MINNESOTA FAIR

Marion, O., Sept. 7.—Warren G. Harding is on his way to Minnesota, where tomorrow he will deliver a speech at the State fair. It is the first departure from the front porch program. Only one speech is planned on the trip. It is probable that the candidate will make short talks from the rear end of the train en route. At Fort Sheridan, Ill., Senator Harding will be the guest of General Wood for several hours.

Although the White Star liner Cretic arrived at the lower harbor from Mediterranean ports and the Azores none of the large number of passengers were permitted to leave the ship until today. The Cretic brought in 231 saloon, 104 cabin and 1,467 steerage passengers.

Among the saloon passengers were Luigi Barra, glove manufacturer of Italy; Wendell Clarke, Canadian commissioner to Italy; A. Fresinetti, a wealthy Californian and his family, returning from a visit to their old home; Max E. A first payment of 7.50 puts a Hoover in your home. The balance to be paid in ten small equal monthly payments.

The Hoover Is a Better Kind of Electric Vacuum Sweeper—Because

IT BEATS . . . AS IT SWEEPS AS IT CLEANS

It Beats—
The Hoover beats out buried dirt—indoors, dustlessly. The carpeting is fluttered more than a thousand times each minute upon a cushion of air. Deeply lodged grit is loosened and shaken forth. Beaten to the surface, powerful suction removes it.

As It Sweeps—
The Hoover sweeps while it beats. Its beating-sweeping brush is patented. Whizzing like aeroplane propellers, 24 large soft bristle tufts make countless sweeping contacts. Hairs, lint and threads that cling like cockleburs are speedily collected.

As It Cleans—
The Hoover beats as it sweeps, as it suction cleans. Hence the Hoover thoroughly removes dirt. Crushed-down nap is righted and, of course, removing the dust so thoroughly makes the colors almost like new and helps prolong the life of carpeting.

See the Hoover sweep, suction-clean, straighten nap and reveal the dust-hidden colors of carpets and rugs. Learn why, through removing the grit and dirt so thoroughly, it will help prolong the life of floor coverings—Second Floor, Annex.

American Woolen Company

TO THE PUBLIC:

The leadership in the woolen goods trade which has been attained by the American Woolen Company has naturally subjected it to a variety of attacks, most of which, outside of trade and political rivalry, have been based upon misunderstanding.

The size of the operations of the American Woolen Company—its large capital employed in the production of seventy varieties of cloth in ten thousand varieties of styles; its capital investment in fifty-seven mills and its employment of more than 40,000 mill workers—places in in the position of something more than a private corporation.

It has duties toward the national government to whom it has paid more than $20,000,000 in taxes in a single year or more than 10% of the gross volume of its sales. The government should have reciprocal duties in protection of this American industry.

It has duties toward 15,000 people who own its $40,000,000 7% preferred shares—the first and only lien upon an investment estimated at above $150,000,000. These stockholders are not speculators; they are the backbone and sinew of our industrial life which must be based upon the savings of the people. When money is easy, these shares sell at 10% premium. When money rules as at present at high interest rates, they sell at 5 @ 10% discount from their issue price of $100 per share.

The American Woolen Company has duties toward the 3000 owners of its common shares—formerly $20,000,000 but recently expanded by the issue of $20,000,000 additional stock for new working capital. The stock was offered to shareholders at par, was underwritten at 5% commission by a syndicate of bankers and capitalists, and is now quoted at 20% discount from par, although every share represents an equity value above the preferred shares of more than $200 per share.

The American Woolen Company has duties toward its faithful employees which rank ahead of its obligations to its ordinary shareholders and are co-equal with the interests of its preferred shareholders. All are dependent, more or less, for their living and their livelihood, upon wise and just management in the conduct of this great enterprise.

The American Woolen Company aims to recognize its manifold duties to the public, not only in the production of the best woolen goods American enterprise can produce and in the meeting of honest competition in free and open American markets, but in the maintenance, so far as possible, of steady employment for its employees. It recognizes that upon this steady employment depends the welfare of the cities and towns in which its mills are located.

To carry out these manifold duties it must aim toward steadiness in prices and fair values for its goods; for its wool purchased and for its labor employed. It must avoid, so far as possible, the purchase of wool at boom prices and it must be forehanded in the use of its capital in the purchase of wool in times of liberal supply.

It must aim to hold its skilled labor organization with the fewest possible changes. It therefore pays the highest wages and gives the steadiest employment, so far as it is supported by the public in the purchase of its goods.

To manufacture and accumulate a stock of goods when the public refuses to purchase is only to invite disaster in markets and prices, reacting in the end upon our employees and the savings that furnish the capital. Such a policy continued would only result in prolonged depression disorganizing all the forces of both labor and capital which must jointly support this enterprise in its service to the public.

The company must manufacture according to orders either on its books or clearly foreseen. Early in this year the company had on its books sufficient orders to insure employment for six months.

Labor was in universal demand and prices of wool and woolen goods were at the highest seen since this company was organized. To maintain our organization and insure the fulfillment of our contracts another advance in wages of 15% was announced to our employees in May.

With the advance in the money rate and increasing restrictions to credit, cancellations began to come in; but for some time they were no more than might be expected and not larger in volume than had been seen in pre-war times without making disturbance in the industry.

When, however, on May 26th, the government brought indictments against this company for prices charged for its goods in open and competitive markets, it was notice to the trade by the government that the prices for woolen cloth must be reduced. Although the indictments were dismissed by the court of first jurisdiction on June 11th, cancellation of orders became universal over the country. Total cancellations based upon figures collected by the government are estimated for the whole trade at the entire annual output of the American Woolen Company.

The total cancellation of orders upon the books of the American Woolen Company amounted to more than $40,000,000 or sufficient to give employment for two months to all our workers.

To have continued to manufacture and accumulate unsaleable goods would have been, not only financial suicide, but would have insured a depression in the entire woolen industry from which it would have taken many weeks, if not months, to recover by universal shutdowns with widespread disorganization and unemployment.

Therefore instead of the usual two weeks' vacation in August, the mills were shut down on July 10th, which was fortunately the best season for a two months' vacation. Had the shutdown been forced in the winter season, as it would have been by continued accumulation of goods, there might have been, with high prices and famine conditions for fuel, some personal suffering.

To September 1st, however, there has been less call upon the company and the public authorities for personal assistance than in the preceding year, when there was only a two weeks' vacation. The reason for this wholesome condition in our mill communities was the large volume of wages paid the past year—a sum exceeding anything ever before known in the American woolen industry. Yet the average wage is not higher than that in other skilled trades entering into the cost of living.

We believe in good wages for the American skilled working man—the highest wages that expenditure by wage earners themselves will justify. The makers of goods are the consumers of goods in this country. Prices must depend upon wages and consumption.

The American Woolen Company will be a success only so far as it is fair and just to the capital and the labor which it employs and to the public which it serves.

If you believe in the policy of the American Woolen Company in the maintenance of good wages for skilled working men, order your goods promptly this season, and if you carefully select your woolen cloth according to your needs, you will find in the American Woolen Company production such a variety as will make it unnecessary for you to invite foreign importations.

The American Woolen Company begins its exhibit to the trade Thursday, September 9th, and will begin the starting up of its mills Monday, September 13th.

The wage scale will be the same as when the millls were forced to close in July.

The support of the public in the prompt purchase of the goods of the American Woolen Company is invited.

Quit Laxatives, Purges; Try NR

NR Tonight—Tomorrow Feel Right

It is a mistake to continually dose yourself with so-called laxative pills, calomel, oil, purges and cathartics and force bowel action. It weakens the bowels and liver and makes constant dosing necessary.

Why don't you begin right today to overcome your constipation and get your system in such shape that daily purging will be unnecessary? You can do so if you get a 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and take one each night for a week or so.

NR Tablets do much more than merely cause pleasant easy bowel action. This medicine acts upon the digestive as well as eliminative organs—promotes good digestion, causes the body to get the nourishment from all the food you eat, gives you a good, hearty appetite, strengthens the liver, overcomes biliousness, regulates kidney and bowel action and gives the whole body a thorough cleaning out. This accomplished you will not have to take medicine every day. An occasional NR tablet will keep your body in condition and you can always feel your best.

Try Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and prove this. It is the best bowel medicine that you can use and costs only 25c per box, containing enough to last twenty-five days. Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

MRS. NELLIE WOODSFORD SPEAKS TO MOTHERS

"East Boston.—At 23 Lamson St., Mrs. Nellie Woodsford and her children now "live happy and grateful" to the kind neighbor who recommended Dr. True's Elixir to them. Mrs. Woodsford says: "My bowels were out of order and my breath was foul when I shake it over. I had terrible headaches and it seemed I had suffered years before your Dr. True's Elixir was brought to me. After a short time I was myself again, my bowels were right and I'm full of gratitude. It may interest you to know also that once since my youngest was born, she was sick and it was a serious case. She will have your Elixir to thank for relieving her of stomach worms."

Dr. True's Elixir, the Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, has done wonders for children and grown-ups since 1865. Pleasant to take, mild in action.—Advertisement.

Disfiguring Growths of Hair Entirely Removed

(New Method Removes Roots and All)

If you are afflicted with a growth of superfluous hair, go to your druggist at once, get a stick of phelactine. Follow simple instructions—and save the pleasant surprise of your life! With your eyes open you will see the hair come by roots and all — quickly, easily, leaving your skin smooth and hairless as a baby's. Phelactine is not to be compared with the usual depilatory or electrical methods. It is new and different. It is odorless, non-irritating, and so harmless a child could safely eat it.—Advertisement.

This Leaves the Arms Free From Hairy Growths

(Toilet Talks)

A simple method for completely removing every trace of hair or fuzz in here given. This is painless and usually a single treatment will banish even stubborn growths. To remove hairs, make a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and after about two minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain you get delatone.—Advertisement.

THREE SHOT IN GANG FIGHT

Policeman Returns Fire of Armed Thugs in Battle Near North Station

Louis Pilanski, aged thirty-nine, of No. 1 Cunard avenue, and Thomas Cacciola, aged forty-one, of No. 136 Merrimac street, are at the Relief Station suffering from bullet wounds received during a gang fight at Green and Staniford streets early today. Pilanski was hit by a bullet on the right side of his chest and Cacciola received several wounds on his legs.

Guy Ciardiello, of No. 39 Chambers street was hit in the neck by one of the bullets. The police have been unable to locate him and he has failed to appear at the Relief Hospital for treatment.

The wounded men at the Relief Station informed the police they were surrounded by several men who had been running in the direction of the North Station. Another group of men followed a short distance behind firing shots. The runners stopped several times to return the fire, and according to the story of the wounded men, several people were hurt besides themselves.

When Patrolman Galvin of the Joy street station arrived on the scene he was fired upon by one of the gangsters. The shot went wild and the officer returned the fire, striking one of the gang. The police in their search for several of the gangsters found three revolvers and a large knife in a doorway near the scene of the fight.

This is a slight increase over last year. In the high school registration is more than 200. The closing of the American Woolen Company mills, probably will reduce the grade school increase.

"DANDERINE"

Stops Hair Coming Out; Doubles Its Beauty.

A few cents buys "Danderine." After an application of "Danderine" you can not find a fallen hair or any dandruff, besides every hair shows new life, vigor, brightness, more color and thickness.—Advertisement.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonful of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

"HITCHY-KOO" SCORES AT COLONIAL

By FRED J. McISAAC.

For the first time on any stage "Hitchy-Koo, 1920" was performed at the Colonial Theatre last night, with Raymond Hitchcock, Julia Sanderson, G. P. Huntley, Charles Withers and other well-known performers in the cast.

Opening a huge review without preliminary tryout in a city as big as Boston is something rarely risked, but it looked as though the experiment would succeed all right, though the review manufacturers, present and on the job in large numbers, have lots of work left to do.

HITCHY'S WINGS CLIPPED.

Hitchy, who roamed all over previous Hitchy-Koo shows, monarch of all he surveyed, has had his wings clipped a bit and is compelled to divide the time pretty evenly with Julia Sanderson and G. P. Huntley. Not a word did he say to the audience in his old familiar way, and his ramblings about the front of the house have ceased entirely.

Now Hitchcock is about the funniest comedian on the American stage and the first thing to do with that show is to give him more work. This Hands Across the Sea stuff is all right too, but Huntley's line is restricted to a "stupid ass of an Englishman, and a little of that gives an American audience plenty, particularly as it has been done to death. There is one scene, in a gun store, in which Huntley does his worst and it is positively deadly. But then that scene is liable to be out of the show by tonight.

FIRST HALF EXCELLENT.

The first half of "Hitchy-Koo 1920" is really great stuff. There is a series of dance numbers ranging from "Cave Dwellers" to La Loi Fuller's serpentine dances, which makes a big hit, and the finale, a street scene in New York in the eighties, is full of atmosphere and humor.

Charles Withers in "For Pity's Sake," a travesty on the old-time melodrama, has a big act, which was probably taken bodily from vaudeville into "Hitchy-Koo," and which is absolutely a riot. It was entirely new to me and I howled as loudly as anybody at the antics of the old country theatre manager.

Julia Sanderson's winsome and fascinating personality shines as brightly as ever, and she did a character bit with Hitchy in a small town drug store which was very amusing.

DANCERS SKILFUL.

Raymond Hitchcock is given a few moments to make some remarks on politics in the second act, and this ought to be buried along with Huntley's gun shop, because they are far from his usual standard.

Florence Dunlavan and the Mosconi Brothers do some very clever dancing, which helps the show a lot. The costumes are startling, brilliant and very expensive looking. They were designed by Mme. B. Hasing of the Ba-Ta-Clan Theatre in Paris. That theatre was never noted for its expensive productions, but you have to hand it to madame. She spent the money like water and got some wonderful results.

There is the usual large and beautiful chorus and lively, if not especially striking music by Jerome Kern.

WALDRON'S CASINO—There is no heavy story or plot to worry about in Barney Gerard's latest edition of "Follies of the Day," which he offers to the patrons of Waldron's Casino all this week, but there is a world of good, wholesome laughs, a lot of whistly, tuneful music, a cast of clever actors, singers and comedians, a chorus of beautiful girls and a scenic and costume investiture that would cause an ordinary bank account to shout for mercy. Mr. Gerard's prolific pen has rounded out a burlesque for the current season entitled "The Political Revue." It deals with local and national politics and is full of good hits.

REVERE BEACH—Revere Beach was the scene of much revelry and fun yesterday and the holiday crowds which thronged from far and near were bent on having a regular day of it. Every concession along this vast expanse of water front was opened and well patronized and the various amusement devices ran at full capacity. Some of the more liberally patronized places were the Nautical Gardens, the Pit, Whirlpool, Darby Rocker, merry-go-rounds, Roller Coaster, Scenic Railways and in fact every device know to amusement. But the crowning event of the day came in the evening, when shortly after dark, the most gorgeous and magnificient display of fireworks ever shot into the air.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM—The holiday yesterday at the Malden Auditorium was ushered in by the presentation by the Temple Players of James M. Barrie's comedy "What Every Woman Knows." Memories of Maude Adams were rife through the offering of the comedy by this exceedingly capable stock company who gave a most satisfactory presentation. Miss Bushnell was Maggie Wylie, the girl whose soul was possessed by the spirit of romance though she was placed in the material environment of a Scotch household.

GORDON'S CHELSEA OLYMPIA—This theatre was reopened yesterday as one of the big events in Chelsea's celebration of Labor Day. Thousands of amusement lovers packed the playhouse at all performances and exhibited enthusiastic approval of the splendor and luxurious comfort of the theatre as it is at present after undergoing alterations by painters, decorators, and theatrical artists. Anita Stewart appeared in the leading role of "The Yellow Typhoon."

GORDON'S SCOLLAY SQ. OLYMPIA—One of the biggest and best picture and vaudeville programs of the year was shown last evening at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia. The bill included Hazel Green, assisted by a company of six men, and Lillian Herlein, accompanied by Earle Thurnesse in a cycle of songs.

"EAST IS WEST" ABOUNDS IN FINE ACTING

By FRED J. McISAAC.

"East is West," after nearly two seasons in New York, came to the Shubert last night, with Fay Bainter in her original part, and the remainder of the cast practically unchanged.

This piece is a comedy by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer. It was staged by Clifford Brooke. Overture and Chinese songs by Robert Hood Bowers.

The scene of the play is partly in China and partly in San Francisco. Its story, while rather improbable, is sentimental and appealing, and it is told in a straightforward, if rather commonplace manner. But the cleverness with which its oriental scenes are set, the fine acting of the cast and particularly the work of Fay Bainter make it one of the biggest bits of several seasons in New York, and will undoubtedly make it successful here.

FAY BAINTER CHARMING.

Miss Bainter is one of the most charming and unusual personalities to display itself on the American stage in some years. She served the usual apprenticeship, in fact she has been an actress since she was five years old, and she is now in her middle twenties. Her first big chance came in "The Willow Tree" two or three seasons ago, and she followed it up with "East is West."

Miss Bainter makes of Ming Toy, the cunning little Chinese girl rescued from the Love Boat on the Yang-tse-Kiang river, and translated in an occidental atmosphere, one of the most striking characters in recent seasons. Her rare exotic charm, her daintiness and exquisiteness, make the most unlikely situations seem possible and desirable.

MRS. HIBBARD EFFECTIVE.

In the big cast supporting her I noticed the name of Mrs. George A. Hibbard. Mrs. Hibbard was the wife of the late Mayor of Boston, finding herself with a family to support on her husband's death, Mrs. Hibbard went on the stage and has made a reputation as a character actress. She plays the part of Mrs. Benson very effectively.

Robert Ober is a sterling actor who strengthens this cast and so do George Nash, Clarence Handyside and Fred Howard. Altogether it is a play you ought not to miss.

Comedy At Plymouth

"Mrs. Jimmie Thompson," a farce-comedy which opened at the Plymouth Theatre yesterday, will be reviewed by Arch in the American on Wednesday. Large holiday audiences greeted the opening.

Cecil Lean Returns

Cecil Lean, in "Look Who's Here" opened at the Arlington Theatre yesterday. The musical comedy is tuneful and popular. Wednesday's American will contain a full review of the musical hit.

Plays That Remain

WILBUR THEATRE—"Irene" continues to draw capacity audiences to the Wilbur.

MAJESTIC—"The Little Whoopee" has been adjudged one of the best musical comedies of the year. It continues at the Majestic.

TREMONT—"Shavings" began its second week yesterday with two holiday audiences that filled the playhouse and gave every manifestation of delight throughout the entire performances. This play has certainly "caught on" in Boston, as it did in New York.

PARK SQUARE—"Nightie Night," the contagious farce which is now in its second week of popularity, is riding fast and furious into popular favor, and yesterday's matinee and evening audiences howled with glee at the antics of the suspected husband.

HOLLIS STREET—"Three Wise Fools" began its final week at the Hollis Street Theatre yesterday to two happy holiday audiences. This fine comedy by Austin Strong furnishes ideal dramatic entertainment.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE — "39 East," which was presented yesterday by the Somerville Players, at Somerville Theatre, created equally as much of a sensation in that city as it did when offered in Boston and New York last season. It is a most delightful comedy, with a rare romance that it centered about a homely yet genteel boarding house, and a young girl who is ejected because she cannot pay her rent.

GLOBE OPENS WITH 'PITTER PATTER'

The Globe Theatre, after a brief career as a movie-vaudeville house, returned again to the legitimate fold and opened the season with "Pitter Patter," a musical comedy based on William Collier and Grant Stewart's farce, "Caught in the Rain."

The piece was well received by a crowded house and from its reception it would appear that the up-town theatre will be a popular place for playgoers this season if the quality of the shows are to be of the "Pitter Patter" class.

Will M. Hough, its author, has taken enough of the plot of "Caught in the Rain" to make a consistent vehicle for a worthy musical comedy. Its musical numbers, all of the catchy type, are well presented, and the characters are well minded.

The part of Muriel Mason, the demure girl courted by bashful Dick Crawford, erstwhile Major Whitney, a much decorated hero of the A. E. F., is well taken by Jane Richardson, a young woman with a most appealing voice.

William Kent plays the part of the timorous swain to perfection, and the other characters are well presented. The musical numbers are well supported by a chorus of excellent singers and dancers, attractively costumed.

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Roslyn, L. I., Sept. 7.—Page the Cunard Line and obtain eastbound reservations for three English golfers, who will be leaving soon for Liverpool.

The British clean up of all big golfing titles ended very abruptly at the Engineers' and North Shore golf clubs when Cyril Tolley, British amateur champion, and his countrymen, Lord Charles Hope and Roger Wethered, all failed to qualify for the American title.

Tolley might have qualified. He took but 81 in the first round, but he ruined himself on the tenth hole of his second round at the Engineers' where he took a nine.

Tommy Armour, holder of the French amateur title, and G. D. Grier, the Canadian amateur title holder, were the only golfers from outside the United States who remained in the competition when the first round of match play was started today.

Other American Notables Who Qualified

Freddy Wright, Jr., Massachusetts amateur champion, tied Bobby Jones, Jr., for the low medal. Fred held Bobby shot for shot. They each took 79 in the morningat the Engineers' and 75 in the afternoon at the North Shore.

A few shots behind Freddy was Francis Ouimet of Woodland. The third Massachusetts golfer to qualify in was F. G. Newton, the State captain. Ouimet was 77 on the Engineers' and 82 at North Shore for 159 while Newton was 81 and 83.

America also has Chick Evans, Bob Gardner, Oswald Kirkby, Jesse Sweetser, Ned Sawyer, Woody Platt and a few others to prevent Grier or Armour from romping off with the American cup.

Jesse Guilford failed to qualify. He took but 78 at the Engineers' and appeared sure of going into the match play. But he took things altogether too easily at North Shore and got an 88.

The draw in favorable to Massachusetts, with Ouimet and Wright so placed in their half that they will not meet unless they go to the semi-finals, while Newton is in the upper half. Leading cards:

TWO MORE DOWN FOR RED SOX

Twin Bill With Senators Before Trip West—Chicago Next Stop

Washington, Sept. 7.—The Red Sox wound up their Washington series of the season today with a double-header. The first game started early to allow both teams catch trains for the West. The Sox step off at Chicago while the Senators keep on to St. Louis. Captain Hooper sent in Bush and Myers, while Griff used Shaw and Erickson.

After playing sterling ball at home the Red Sox came here and ran into a battling shape while the Senators woke up and played the sort of ball they gained quite a reputation by in the Spring. Jones and Hoyt had little to fool the locals and they won out handily, 6 to 0 and 5 to 1. Zachary pitched a sterling game against Jones and was never in danger. Griff tried a youngster, Hamilton by name, in the second game, and although he frequently got into trouble, sensational fielding tided him over the rough spots.

Bike Races Put Over

National Net Title Goes to Tilden

New York, Sept. 7.—William T. Tilden, II, the rangy Californian who won the title of champion of the British Isles when with the Davis Cup team he defeated the foremost players of all nations, including Gerald Patterson, the Australian, captured the all comers lawn tennis tournament for the individual championship of the United States at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills.

The majority of the sharps said the Easterner could not defeat William M. Johnston of California, the defending champion, but Tilden played at his best and put over a victory, though it took him five strenuous sets to do it. The scores of the match were 6—1, 4—6, 7—5, 5—7 and 6—3.

For the third time in succession Vincent Richards, the seventeen-year-old tennis sensation, carried off the junior title by defeating W. W. Ingraham of Oakland, R. I. in straight sets.

St. Ambrose Wins

The St. Ambrose club defeated the Dorchester Town team, 5 to 3, in 10 innings, on Town Field.

NO LAYOFF FOR TIRED BRAVES

Another Double Header Scheduled for Today Against the Giants

There was no rest for the weary today, the weary being the Boston Braves and New York Giants, who on the holiday toiled through a double bill just to run into another 18-sixty-four hours later.

It was pretty tough on both pitching staffs, more especially on the Giants, who had to be called for the 3 o'clock game. Manager McGraw was not so much anxious to keep a few hurlers on ice to stave off the threatened assault on the Polo Grounds citadel by the Cincinnati Redlegs.

But playing schedules must be complied with as Manager Stallings elected the two Johns, Scott and Watson, to toil the hillocks for the Braves, while McGraw decided that Rube Benton and Fred Toney were best the fellows to pull off a two-ply victory for the Giants.

Fillingim Very Good, Oeschger the Reverse

The holiday pastimes were divided, chiefly because of the varying brands of Boston pitching. Dana Fillingim was very good in the opening tilt, holding the invaders to a couple of hits. Joe Oeschger was not so good, and allowed nine hits in the second encounter. These, combined with some rather listless play on the part of some of the Braves, were sufficient to give the Giants five runs, or just four more than they needed, as the Braves were unable to score any runs off Art Nehf, though they nicked him safely seven times.

Jess Barnes, who hurled the first pastime for the invaders, was directly responsible for its loss. In the sixth inning he uncorked a very wild pitch, immediately after Horace Ford had tripled. Naturally Horace scored, and that was about all there was to the battle.

County Galway Wins.

QUIMET PRAISES YOUNG STARS

Both Wright and Jones Played Soundest Golf, Former U. S. Title-Holder Declares

By FRANCIS OUIMET.

Roslyn, L. I., Sept. 7.—Amateur championship golf has always been a game of surprises. The uncertainties crop out in each event of importance, and when a national championship takes place surprises happen with remarkable frequency. Without a doubt our title event of this season contains the names of our greatest amateur players, veterans who were in the habit of cleaning up in days gone by as well as budding stars who have more recently gained national prominence.

Listed among those who sought the American title were four of England's best stars. Cyril Tolley won the British amateur championship only a few months ago. Roger Wethered had also established himself as a player of great class, and Lord Charles Hope had for some time been a British star. Reinforced by Tom Armour, the newly-crowned French champion, it was felt that we were in great danger of losing this year's amateur title, the same as we lost the open title a foreign-born player. The fact that there was to be a qualifying round meant hardly anything. Yet, when the cards had been turned in, it was found that with the exception of Armour, the Britons had failed.

The honors of the qualifying round fell to Bobby Jones and Freddy Wright. Both played very soundly. Much was naturally expected from Bobby and he lived up to these expectations. He certainly is a grand golfer. Young Wright is little known except around Massachusetts, but for all that he is a star. That he could go out and lead a field along with Jones places him in the front rank.

Dempsey's Own Story of Miske Battle

By JACK DEMPSEY,
Heavyweight Champion of the World.

Benton Harbor, Sept. 7.—Well, my first battle in defence of the title is over—and I won a whole lot easier than I expected.

I flured that I probably would have to take a little punishment from Billy before I brought him down. But as far as I can recall he never socked me with anything but short lefts or rights in the clinches.

He was pretty soft, but I certainly did have to wallop that boy before I could end the show. That body smash I landed under his heart in the second was about as hard a blow as I ever hit anybody. But Billy got up and continued the battle—a happening which did surprise me quite a little.

But never, from the end of the first minute of fighting in the first round, did I have any other belief than that I would get him—and do it before we had traveled very far.

One of my ambitions ever since I won the title has been to improve in boxing. Throughout the past year I schooled myself in it. I came to believe that I could box fairly well. And I determined to put myself to a test in the first round with Billy.

AND NOW BUSY ON CARPENTIER.

It will be a sort of warm-up for the day when I take on that Georges Carpentier. They tell me that he's the greatest boxer in the world—and I want to dispute that title of his when the chance comes. That's why I boxed so much during my training and that's why I boxed Miske in that first round, rather than resort to slugging.

I wanted to see what I could do as a boxer. And I think I did fairly well for a novice, at least. Anyway, I didn't let Billy hit me—and although I simply hoved it with him in the first, I had no trouble hooking or jabbing him almost at will.

With the bang of the gong for the second round of fighting I shed the boxing altogether and went out to get Billy Miske in the way that I've gotten Willard, Fulton, Morris and the rest. I went out to sling, walk around and around until I found an opening, and then I let loose.

Miske is a tough youth—don't make any mistake about that. I fought him twice, and I remembered that he could take an awful socking. So I decided that rather than try to bring him down with one terrific blow, I'd just chop him down gradually, and then finish him when the time was ready.

Billy was not a hard target for me in the second—that is, not during the latter part. Early they that he is he never would give me a fair crack at his jaw or body, until I tricked him into it. And I did it with the old right hand lead that went straight through.

FOOLS MISKE WITH RIGHT LEAD.

Most of the fighters leading with the right usually do it merely to whirl around to the other fellow, so they can land with the real blow—a left hook.

Naturally, every fighter, when he sees a right lead coming, turns toward that right, not figuring that the right is going through, and that is why I was so successful, because I followed through with the right.

I led with the right for Billy's body in the middle of the second. He expected that I was going to land a left—that the right was only a bluff. But I sent that right straight through, and Miske went down as the blow flashed under his heart.

Billy got up after a count of five, and I tried to finish him then. But that boy had a whole lot of sense left. He clinched it with me, and he certainly clinched with all the desperation possible.

When the third round came along, I went out carefully avoiding Miske. I know he wanted to clinch, and I wanted to hit him in the open. And I succeeded fairly well. Billy had slowed up a bit, and I didn't have much trouble keeping out of his way. Nor did I have trouble hitting him. Every short lead was a hit, whether it went for the head or the body.

LEFT TO BODY HURTS MISKE.

I hooked a short left into Miske's stomach, and when he winced and seemed to sag I knew I had him. So I tore in then, tricked him into letting down his guard by faking a punch for his stomach, and then I shot a right hook with all my power. It was headed for the jaw, and that's where it landed. And even as it hit I knew Miske was through.

And now if they'll bring on the rest of the heavyweights in this country—and elsewhere—I'll be glad to oblige them. I needed this first fight to tune me up. I've had it.

I'm ready, and ready to fight every week if necessary. I used to do it before I became champion and I certainly ought to be able to do it now.

MONTREAL WINNER IN MOORE BATTLE

Woonsocket, R. I., Sept. 6—Young Montreal won from Tal Moore in a fast a twelve-round boxing exhibition as has been seen in these parts for many moons. Clinton Oval was well filled when the pocket-edition gladiators entered the ring prepared to demonstrate which one was entitled to battle Pete Herman for the crown. Tal was missing the "wallop" that goes with his name and lost to Montreal who did not allow him to dance about the ring.

Young Gardner, Newport, won from Kid Kansas, Providence, in eight rounds. Young Duffy, Providence, defeated Gene Ware, Milford, in six rounds. Young Slate lost to Johnnie Crowley in the second round.

Lifting the Lid

I WAS told yesterday that if I announced my price this Fall at $3.85, it would turn the hat industry upside down and inside out—but I'm going to lift the lid and take the consequences. I'm going to sell hats without profit this Fall, and give the final wallop to the High Cost of Living in the High Price of Hats.

The public have been on a "Buying Spree" for the last couple of years, but they're on a "Buying Strike" today. I'm going to break that strike by breaking the price of hats.

If you'll help me bring 100,000 new customers in my stores this month you'll see the High Price of Hats begin to tumble, and you can get under cover right now for $3.85.

I'd like to have the Flying Squadron of the Department of Justice investigate my Prices and Profits this Fall, and compare the Style and Quality of my hats with other hats selling for twice my price. If they don't stop me for underselling the market, you can have any new Fall color or style, any shape or size, in any soft hat or derby, at $3.85.

They're all one Price $3.85

A Stirring Story of a Father's Effort to Protect His Beautiful Daughter From the Grasping Exploitation of Her Unprincipled Mother

ROMANCE, that skilful painter, who with a single touch of his brush transforms the gloomy world into a place of living light, sat near the shoulder of Alice Hale in the Convent Garden of St. Mary's, noting with his invisible smile that she was like a bit of Southern sunshine with her lovely blond hair and dreamy eyes.

Perhaps the girl sealed with a book of poems on her knee felt his presence subconsciously, for she looked into the distance as though trying to visualize the scene of the Beggar Maid who came before the throne of King Cophetua.

So sweet a face, such angel grace,
In all the land had never been;
Cophetua swore a royal oath:
"This beggar maid shall be my queen."

Somehow Alice had always thought of herself, if not as a Beggar Maid, still as a kind of wanderer whom nobody wanted. Unlike the other girls who walked and talked with her in their daily exercises indoors and out, she did not know her father or her mother.

They seemed to her mythical persons who had suddenly disappeared, leaving her to the mercies of the convent in which she had spent her life as long as she could remember. Youth is always only too ready to be cruel, and the young ladies whose schoolgirl affairs she regarded her as though they had good grounds for suspicion of anyone who could not claim a home.

The words of Tennyson rang in her ears as her eyes were focussed on the land of romance beyond the convent walls. The girl's sniffed. Alice made too lovely a picture to be viewed with feminine placidity.

"Parvenu," sneered a young lady whose ancestry secured her a place in the Burke of the South, even though her bad manners seemed to more than counterbalance her lineage.

An Invitation Arrives

"My dear," one of the nuns overheard and rebuked her. The culprit bowed her head in mock humility, ashamed not of her sneer but of being discovered.

In the centre of the garden not far from a small shrine the sweet-faced nun was stopped in her walk by one of her impetuous charges who flourished a letter and seized her arm. "Mother Angela, read this!"

The woman took the letter and read while the other stood watching with an occasional glance at her bosom friend Alice, still gazing into the unknown.

"Your father," said the nun, "is very kind, but my dear——"

The girl cut her short—"You've read what he says—that Alice has never been on a vacation like the rest of us—think how she'll enjoy it—what it would mean to her. Father was an orphan himself—he says so—so he can sympathize with Alice—you'll let her come with me."

The Mother nodded—from the first she had had no idea of refusing, and the girl with a radiant smile ran to the tree.

Alice came back to earth as her friend threw her arms about her and kissed her.

"I've a surprise for you."

"For me, Mabel?"

"For you"—and she held forth the letter—"you're to come with me through vacation. Father has asked me to bring you—won't that be wonderful?"

"You're an kind to me, Mabel"

"Who wouldn't be—besides you're the one who's been kind to me."

The two girls went off arm in arm, the one to recount the other to listen to, the charms of hospitality in one of the homes of the lovely South.

To Fairyland

To Alice the whole plan seemed to belong to that fairyland of dreams called forth by the story of King Cophetua. Since she could remember she had never been outside the city of New Orleans, which lay like a barrier beyond the convent walls. Now she was to travel like the other girls, to see strange sights to know the delights of riding horseback, to see new people; it was too unreal to be credible.

"I'll never forget," said Mabel Andrews, "how sweet you were to me when I first came here—I felt lonely, and I'm afraid I gave no hint of being properly impressed with the F F V spirit of some of our dear classmates."

"They don't mean to be rude," said Alice condescendingly.

"There's nothing to make them that way," answered Mabel drily, "but of course it doesn't count here when one's father happens to be rich—you didn't know that when I came in," she laughed, "and they didn't either."

"It's all your doing," said Alice. "I mean my going away—confess now you asked if I might tag along."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Dreaming of Romance, Alice Hale Looked Far Beyond the Convent Walls

When Company Comes

By Loretto C. Lynch.

EVERY young housewife comes to a time when the man of the house brings home unexpectedly a guest or two for dinner. And if one is not prepared for this emergency and is some distance from the stores, embarrassment is sure to follow unless one has been wise enough to plan for just this sort of thing.

Select a shelf in the cupboard, line it with paper and keep it sacredly, as an emergency shelf. Put into a box your best company table cloth, six napkins and your best table doilies. Have a few cans of evaporated milk, soup, some peas, corn, asparagus or any other vegetables. Canned tomatoes and canned tomato soup lend themselves to many manipulations in cooking, and might well be found on any emergency shelf.

Canned chicken, mushroom, pimentos, salmon, tuna, shrimp, lobster or crab offer a number of possibilities.

It is advisable to have a package soda biscuit and sweet crackers as well as a package of prepared flour and a glass or two of sliced bacon. There should be a few cans of fruit and a glass or two of jam. Salted almond in glass and bottled olives always lend a festive touch to any company fare. A small container of prepared marshmallow whip will often turn an ordinary dessert into a real company one.

One particularly efficient young housewife I know goes so far as to keep two or three guest towels and a bit of untouched soap as well as a big coverall apron on this shelf. She tells me she can prepare a company dinner for four on a moment's notice and cook and serve it within half an hour. She is always careful, however, to replace each thing taken from this shelf next day, and in this way she is never caught short.

She has half a dozen company menus on cards so that there isn't even a moment lost in planning.

Here is one of her company dinners:

Chilled Olives Salted Almonds
Cream of Celery Soup
Baked Chicken Pie
Rice Green Peas
Asparagus Salad
Peaches with Marshmallow Whip
Sweet Crackers
Coffee

When she had fresh milk on hand she used it. Two cups of evaporated milk and another cup of water were added to the canned celery soup and the whole heated with a lump of butter and a little salt and pepper.

Canned chicken cut into irregular pieces was mixed with mushroom, a little grated onion and a couple of cups of well-seasoned white sauce, were the sounds for the chicken pie. The mixture was placed in individual casserole dishes, a biscuit crust made by rubbing a tablespoon of butter into a half cup of prepared flour and moistening the mass to a soft dough was patted out and placed over each pie. After twelve minutes is enough for these in a hot oven. A few left-over cold boiled potatoes may be diced and added to the pie filling.

By painting over the top of the crust with milk before baking an appetising brown color is quickly obtained.

As to management it is best to put to boil a large tea kettle of water first. Open the cans and empty the contents into dishes to stand in air. Wash and put the rice to boil. Lay the table. Prepare the biscuit dough. Make and put to bake the pies. Prepare and set to table the dessert. Heat the peas and make the soup. Serve the soup and start the coffee. By the time you return to the kitchen with the soup plates the coffee will be ready. The rest of the dinner is easily served and does not necessitate the hostess leaving the table but perhaps once for the coffee.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis.

BY day the old house looks so dim, so battered and so gray; its angles harsh, its windows grim, its aspect cold—by day. By day the garden seems so small, its flowers so cheap and few, the gaudy sunflowers by the wall so garish 'gainst the blue. By day the narrow pathway leads into the dusty town, and rank on rank the pirate weeds assail its borders brown. But with the night the misty moon sends down a tender light, and what by day was out of tune is harmony—by night. The misty moon's a painter rare who makes the old house seem a picture in its garden fair, a very home o' dream. And when its gentle radiance falls across the roof-tree high, it lends a glory to the walls, a gleam of mystery, and—lo!—the little winding trail leads through the narrow gate far, far away by hill and dale where great Adventures wait. Within the tangled garden close when falls the moon's soft light, the hyacinth, the rue, the rose grow strangely fair—by night. When fragrant dews cling thick and wet where lies the silver mist on pansy and on nightmoths, the moon's an alchemist. And those clear drops are changed to gems beneath the magic light, to pearl and diamond diadems that crown the flowers—by night. A painter and an alchemist, the fleeting moon whose beams thus clothe the dusty world in mist and shape a world of dreams!

Autocratic

"Doctor," a patient said anxiously to an eminent medical authority, "are you sure you have diagnosed my case properly as pneumonia? I have heard that a doctor is sometimes wrong in his diagnosis and treats a man for pneumonia who afterwards dies of typhoid fever."

"You are wrong, sir," the physician answered pompously, "if you think that is likely to happen with me. When I diagnose a case as pneumonia the patient dies of pneumonia."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Full of Danger

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young man two years my senior for a month. I am twenty. I love him dearly and I know my love is returned.

He has told me he is married, but does not live with his wife. He is a home man, and his wife lives beyond their means. She was away when I met him and is still away. She went away with the intention of never seeing him again. He was going to join the service again when he met me.

He is now waiting for a separation. Now, Miss Fairfax, do you think it is wrong to go about with him before he gets the separation? Even though we have known each other such a short while, the least parting would cause us sorrow.

ANXIOUS.

MY dear, a situation like this is always fraught with danger. If you didn't feel this instinctively you would go ahead without troubling to write to me, and so shift the responsibility. A separation won't enable the young man to marry again. Even if it does seem he is seen may be subjected to the wife's spite and involved in a suit for divorce. This is all frank and brutal. On the other hand, there is your love. Isn't that big enough to wait? Can't you see each other on a basis of friendship and among friends, and so avoid comment and snares as well?

Too Sure of His Love

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A friend of mine, of good standing, and very kind hearted, has been going out with a girl for the past year and has learned to love her. The girl is about nineteen, sometimes showing affection, and at others so mean it is really impossible to make her actions out. While out with him she tells him of the many different men who offer to take her out. Although she admits at times she is hurting him, she keeps on.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

HUMAN nature has a sad fashion of undervaluing that of which it's too sure. The girl you describe seems to be a silly little coquette of this type.

Don't Pledge in Haste.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Our family became acquainted with a young man upon his return from France. We have become very good friends. Not having had much pleasure and living away from home he seems depressed. Therefore mother offered him the hospitality of our home and we tried to make it as pleasant as possible for him, which he seemed to appreciate.

For weeks he has not called, even going out of his way to and from business to avoid passing our house. Don't you think he owes mother an explanation?

M E.

THE depression of which you speak may be due to some thing about which the young man hasn't told you. Or it may be a fault of temperament. I'm inclined to think this is at the bottom of his avoidance of you rather than any intent to slight or wound you. It may be possible that he feels uncomfortable about accepting so much of your kindness and hospitality without being in a position to make any return. Instead of jumping to conclusions and feeling slighted, why not write him a friendly little note, telling him that you miss him and wish he wouldn't hurt your mother by neglecting her? If you handle this situation kindly and tactfully you may be of real service to an ex-soldier.

A Dangerous Flirtation

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Every day for the past two weeks, while on my way to business I have met a certain young man. Although the theory of "Love at first sight" is held up to ridicule by a great many, I feel that it has occurred to me. I am nineteen, and he, I should judge, is about twenty-five.

Is there any way I can become acquainted with this young man? I mean, of course, without belittling my own self-respect? We are always conscious of each other, but neither will take the necessary plunge, consequently, what? It is utterly distracting me, my thoughts are continually with him. DISTRACTED.

WHAT can you do, my dear, that won't cheapen you in the young man's eyes? How much do you know of him? He may be married and this little flirtation may be merely a lightly amusing thing to him. A man you see casually in this way may be absolutely unfit for you to know. You have no profiting from getting into very dangerous company if you follow up this sort of chance acquaintance. And what makes it all the more dangerous for you is that your feelings seem to be so deeply involved.

A Startling Revelation

"Where are you off to in such a hurry?" "To fetch the doctor for my husband." "What's up with him?" "He tells me he has acute hepatitis, appendicitis, neuritis and cerebo spinal meningitis." "Where did he get all that?" "Why, a man induced him to buy a medical dictionary and he's just begun reading it."

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

"YES, I've a confession to make," I repeated.

Intent as I was, however, on the fact that I was about to take Jim completely into my confidence, I noted his odd manner of accepting my statement.

Then suddenly I found I didn't know where to start. I swept back to the very beginning—the loss of the ring, my realization that only two persons had had a chance to take it and Bertha's confession that her husband was a crook just out of jail and that she didn't dare stay in service with me.

"You said only two persons had a chance at the ring," interrupted Jim gravely. "Have you forgotten Booth?"

"No, but of course he wouldn't," I began evasively, choking back my inclination to add, "and even though you dislike him, you know that." Then I blurted out, "Oh, I felt from the beginning it was Daisy."

"So did I," replied Jim calmly.

"You knew?" I gasped.

"I can't say I knew. But I knew what you thought."

"Oh, Jim—I wasn't very clever at hiding my suspicions."

Clever Enough

"You were clever enough for the honest, transparent darling you are," replied Jim smiling over the chair-top sweetly and understandingly. "But I'm your husband." I've spent a while studying you, living with you, coming to be more and more completely one with you. Your mental processes aren't dark to me."

"Jim!" I cried in the light of a revelation. "Early this evening when you asked if I trusted you fully and entirely—this was what you meant. When you said if it wasn't for my wanting to help folks we'd have come to a nasty place in our affairs more than once within the past week—you were thinking of this. Oh—I've been such a fool, thinking I was so clever all along——"

"And I don't want to be cleverer than I?" asked Jim gravely.

I leaped to my feet and ran to his side.

"No, I don't!" I cried, putting my arms about his neck and laying my face against his hair. "I want you to be just what you are—dozens of times smarter and more efficient than I am. I'm your wife—that's what I am. Jim Harrison's wife. I'd hate to have it the other way around and you merely Barbara Gene Lane's husband."

"Bless your heart: you dear, human, funny little thing, you're the cleverest person hereabouts. But I'm used to thinking things out—in a game where you have to outguess the other fellow. Ann, you're a good sport, and a nervy little gambler. Now go on with your story, please."

"Jim," I said, stumblingly, "I'll never forget that you let me work it out. You made yourself sympathize with me even if you couldn't with my poor Kate's little sister. And I guess you just ached to get into the game and make a decisive move."

"I sure did!" laughed Jim, reminiscently. "But it was your game. You see, kiddie, that gambling spirit you hate in me was on your side this time."

Tells Theory

"How?" I cried.

"Well, I've told you my theory before. The fellow with a good poker face and a fine sporting disposition wins—no matter what cards the other fellow holds. You kept a straight face that told nothing. And you acted like the whitest little sport I've ever heard tell of. You couldn't help winning in the end. You had the kid licked from the start. So I held off. I'd have bated it if you could have gone on much longer without telling me. What made you decide tonight? Notice anything? See anything—queer?"

"Why, no," I replied, and told him of my search for the blue dress I'd given Daisy and of the way I'd had a mental housecleaning while I was ransacking the place for it."

"Now I've a confession to make," said Jim.

"You" I asked uneasily.

"Sure. When I breezed into the room and found the ring lying there I noticed a parcel on the chair. Thought it was some new finrie I'd ordered. Opened her up. Found that blue dress. Oceans too small for you. Suddenly figured out whom I'd seen wear it. Flung it into my closet because I didn't want to force your hand. And then you came in, and finding me with the ring and the lavender thing you'd worn when the jewel was lifted sad couldn't tell me an out and out lie, but thought I'd fall for your yarning to Uncle Ned over the phone."

On His Shoulder

"Oh, Jim," I cried, hiding my face on his shoulder.

"That blue dress is on the shelf of my closet," said Jim. "I thought you'd have to come to me about it eventually."

"I came without having to," I said softly. "I'll always be glad of that. I'm always coming to you about things, dear. Maybe some day you'll come to me. Then there will be perfect confidence between us.

Jim gave me an odd start and controlled it suddenly. Then he said returning the obvious relief to the subject of Daisy:

"Now the next thing is to get the dress back to the kid. She needs it like the very old Harry—that I'll bet."

"Jim, darling, you're wonderful!" I cried. "I haven't told you how agonisingly she took it—how she suffered and wanted to pay by going to jail. I haven't even told you she brought it back of her own free will. And yet you understand. You have pity for her."

"Pity!" repeated Jim, and I was never more surprised than at the way he said that, for I'd thought the Harrison pride had no understanding of the need of mercy. "Pity? We all need it. Go as far as you like with the Condon child or anyone else you want to help. I'm with you."

"We're together," I said. "Together at last."

And if Fate knew what was going to happen the very next day—how she must have grinned.

SOURCE—An occupation.

IT might appear, at first glance, that some of the family names in this group had their origin in some reference to the cock, or rooster. There is a bare possibility that in some instances the name Cox may have had such an origin.

In such cases it would come as a shortened form of "Cocker-son," that is, "the son of the cock-fighter," for cock fighting is a very ancient sport, and was well established in popular favor in medieval England. Or it might be derived from the form "Atte Cock," or as we would put it today, "at the Sign of the Cock," for in their lack of ability to read, the English of olden times called upon the full range of the animal and vegetable kingdoms with which to illustrate the signs by which they identified their shops and their inns.

But in the vast majority of cases, the forms of the foregoing family names indicate that they came from "cook." There was no uniform method of spelling this word in the middle ages, and it was often necessary to judge whether the writer meant "cook" or "cock" by the sense of his writing. But such a form as "Roger le Cock" or "le Coc" or "le Cok" occurring in the ancient lists of names kept for taxation or other purposes, has only one reasonable translation, "Roger the Cook." And that form of name occurs with such frequency as to insure its perpetuation as a family name. At that period "Roger le Cok" could never have been used with the meaning "Roger Atte Cok."

Household Suggestions

Cut the leather tabs from some old shoes, and cut them into circular pieces about the size of a cent or a nickel. When a button is required on a boy's knickers, or on any garment subject to great stress, place one of the pads on the inner side of the garment where the button is to be sewn on. Tack it securely round. Sew on the button in the usual way, allowing the thread to put a knot on your thread between the button and the cloth; also to put a good winding of thread round the neck of the button, as this is a source of strength. Buttons sewn on this way will never drag a hole in the material.

Instead of darning a large hole in the heel or toe of a stocking, make a crochet patch. Cut away the worn-out part, then crochet round the edge, putting the hook through the material. Continue working round and round, narrowing to give the proper shape, till the hole is filled up.

Always soak dried fruits, such as appieringe, peaches, apricots, pears, prunes and figs, in cold water all night. Cook them in the oven in a large jam-jar covered with a saucer. In a syrup made of sugar and water boiled over the fire till thick, with lemon or orange peel. Then let the fruit cook very slowly for hours.

THE RESTLESS SEX

A Vivid Film Story of Bohemian Society and Studio Life in New York, With Marion Davies

By Robert W. Chambers

GRISMER was visibly astonished.

"That's amazing," he said pleasantly.

"Isn't it?" said Helen. "I don't know whether I'm pleased. She's such a little brick! And Harry believed as he pleased . . . Oh, Lord! Men are queer. People sneer at a problem play, but everybody ever born is cast for some typical problem play part. And sooner or later, well or badly, they play it."

A Matter of Taste

"Critics talk rot; why expect more of the public?" inquired Grismer. "And isn't it funny what a row they make about sex? After all, that's what the world is composed of, two sexes, with a landscape or marine background. What else is there to write about, Cleland?"

The latter laughed.

"It merely remains a matter of good taste. You sculptures have more latitude than painters; painters more than writers. Pathology should be used sparingly in fiction all sciences in fact. Like a clove of garlic applied to a salad bowl, a touch of science is sufficient to flavor it; more than that makes a reek. Better cut out the art altogether if the science fascinates you, and be the author of 'works' instead of mere books."

Stephanie, watching Cleland while he spoke, nodded.

"Yes," she said, "one could write fiction about a hospital nurse, but not about nursing. It wouldn't have any value."

Grismer said:

"We're really very limited in the world. We have land and water, sun and moon and stars, two sexes, love and hate to deal with. Everything else is merely a modification of these elemental fixtures . . . It becomes tiresome, sometimes."

"Oswald! Don't talk like a silly pessimist," said Stephanie sharply.

A Curious Dissertation

He laughed in his easy, attractive way and sat gently swinging one long leg, which was crossed over the other.

He said:

"There is in every living and articulated thing a nerve which, if stroyed, destroys for its possessor a certain area of interest in life. People become pessimists to that extent."

"But, where all the nerves converge to form the vital ganglion, a stroke there means extermination."

"Apropos of what is this dissertation wished upon us?" asked Stephanie with an uneasy smile.

"Did you ever see a paralyzed spider, Stephanie?—alive, breathing, destined to live for weeks, perhaps, and anyway until the wasp's egg under it hatches and becomes a larva to devour it?

"Well, the old wasp required fresh meat for its young, so, with her sting, she annihilated the nerve controlling motion, laid her egg, certain that her progeny would find perfectly fresh food when born. But if she had thrust that sting of hers a little higher—at the juncture of skull and thorax—death would have taken that spider like a stroke of lightning."

He laughed.

"So I say it's better to get the stroke of Fate in the neck than to get it in any particular area and live for a while a paralyzed victim of some creature ultimately to eat alive."

There was a silence. Helen broke it with pleasant decision:

"This is not an appetising conversation. If anybody wishes any the tea is ready."

There was enough daylight left in the studio so that lamps remained unlighted.

"Do you suppose we ought to go out somewhere?" asked Stephanie, "and leave the place to those two poor things in there? You know they may be too unhappy or too embarrassed to come out and run the gantlet."

Stephanie Wrong

But Stephanie was wrong; for, as she ended, Belter appeared at the end of the studio in the fading light. His young wife came slowly forward beside him. The strain the tension, the effort, all were visible, but the girl held herself erect and the man fairly so.

There was tea for them—no easier way to mitigate their ordeal. Conversation became carelessly general; strawberries and little cakes were eaten; a cigarette or two lighted.

Then, after a while there chanced to fall a silence, and the young wife knew that the moment belonged to her.

"I think," she said in a distinct, but still little voice, "that we ought to go home. If you are ready, Harry——"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

By the end of the first week in June Cleland was in a highly excited state of mind in regard to his infant novel, in which all the principals were now on the edge of catastrophe.

"I don't know how they got there," he said nervously to Badger Spink, who had dropped in to suggest himself as illustrator in case any magazine took the story for serial publication.

Spink's clever, saturnine features remained non-committal. If Cleland turned out to be a coming man, he wished to participate and benefit; if he proved a failure, he desired to remain pleasantly aloof.

For the only thing in the world that interested Badger Spink was his own success in life, and he had a horror of contaminating it by any professional association with mediocrity or failure.

"What's your story about?" he inquired with that bluntness that usually passed for the disinterested frankness of good comradeship.

The Hero

"Oh, it's about a writer of stories," said Cleland, vaguely.

"He's the hero?"

"If you'd call him that. What is a hero, Spink? I never saw one in real life."

Spink squinted. It was his way of grinning.

"Well, a literary hero," he said, "is one who pits it over big on his first novel. The country goes crazy about his book, the girls go crazy over him, publishers go chasing after him waving wads, editors flag him with fluttering checks. That's one sort of hero, Cleland. But he's a myth. The real thing is a Charlie Chaplin. All the same, you'd better let your hero make a hit with his novel. If you don't—good night!"

Cleland's features became troubled.

"I suppose his book ought to make a hit to make my book popular," he said. "But as a matter of fact it doesn't. I'm afraid the character I've drawn is not here. He's like us all, Spink; he writes a book; friends flatter; critics slam; the public buys a number of copies, and it's all over in a few weeks. A punk hero—what?"

They remained silent for awhile, and Spink regarded him shrewdly from moment to moment out of his bright, bold eyes. And he came pretty close to the conclusion that he was wasting time.

"Did you ever make any account with your stuff?" he inquired abruptly.

Cleland shook his head.

"Never heard anything from anything you've done?"

"Once," said Cleland, "a woman wrote me from a hospital that she had read a novel I published in England, when I was living in France. She said it had made her forget pain. It's pleasant to get a letter like that."

"Yes," said Spink dryly, "unless she meant your book was an anodyne." He laughed his abrupt, harsh laugh and took himself off.

A Person to Watch

Spink, who haunted the studio now toward noon, so that he could take his wife to luncheon, roared with laughter when Cleland mentioned Spink's visit.

"When there's any rumor of a new man and a new book Spink's always certain to appear out of a cloudless sky, like a buzzard investigating smoke for possible pickings. If you make good he'll stick to you like a burdock burr. If you don't he's too busy to bother you. So he's been around, has he?"

"Yes."

"Watch him, Cleland. Spink is the harbinger of prosperity. He associates himself only with the famous and successful. He is clever, immensely industrious, many sided, diversely talented. He can write, rehearse and stage a play for the Ten Cent Club; he can draw acceptably in any medium; he can write sparkling stuff; his executive ability is enormous; his energy indefatigable. But—that's the man, Cleland. You'll have him at your elbow if you become famous, you'll see only the back of his bushy head if you fail."

Cleland smiled as he ran over the pile of pencilled pages on the desk before him, pausing here and there to cross out, interline, punctuate.

"When Oswald Grismer was rich and promised so well as a sculptor," said Helter, "Spink appeared as usual out of a clear sky, alighted beside Grismer until the poor devil came his cropper.

Stocks Strong; Money 7%; Exchange Lower

New York Stocks

OIL AND STEEL ISSUES UP

Rails Gain in Morning Trading; Baldwin Led Equipments; Coppers and Motors Quiet

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, but below the highest level. Steels and oils remained the leaders all the morning. Rails improved and trading for the session was led by the Lehigh Valley, Erie and Baltimore & Ohio. Excepting Baldwin, equipments were dull and there was not much business in coppers and motors. The market was active, first hour transactions totalling almost 220,000 shares. Call money began at 7 per cent. Sterling was off a quarter of a cent at the opening and other foreign exchange rates were a little lower.

HIGHER AT THE OPENING.

The price movement was upward at the outset, gains being general but small. Chesapeake & Ohio at the start, National Aniline beginning with an initial advance of nearly six points, Barrett was up three points, Baldwin soon lost part of that gain. U. S. Steel began fractionally lower, but rallied soon and showed five points more than a point gain during the first hour. It became the leader before the end of that period. Baldwin was another especially active stock, but did not figure among the strongest. Rails were rather irregular and not as important as they were last week. Oils advanced with steels and made larger gains as a class. Motors and copper were quiet, but ruled higher. Little was done in shipping shares. For the first few minutes the market was slightly reactionary, but on the rally prices were above the first level. Trading was brisk.

SENTIMENT ABOUT THE SAME.

Sentiment did not change to any extent over the triple holiday. There was but little demand for stocks from the outside, but the public is said to be taking more interest in the market. Short covering led in most of its strength this morning. There was a disposition on the part of the professional crowd to realize profits quickly. They do not believe there can be much of a bull movement until the crops are moved and there is an easier money situation.

The New York bank statement of last week was favorable. As to actual condition, there was an increase of $11,710,000 in surplus reserve. As to the reserve ratio of the Federal Reserve system, it was not so high as the week before, standing 42.5 against 41.2. Boston reported 44.1 against 43.1, and New York 38.6 against 38.5.

Busy Building Tankers

Most of the present shipyard work is construction of tank ships. There are now 240 being built and their total deadweight rating is 2,300,000 tons. About two-thirds the ships and somewhat more than two-thirds the tonnage, or approximately 1,700,000 tons, are building in the United States yards, while in British yards about sixty tankers of 400,000 tons are under construction. Continental yards are at work on tonnage totalling approximately 100,000 tons.

Boston Wool Statistics

According to the Commercial Bulletin, rail and water wool shipments from Boston from January 1, 1920, to September 2, 1920, inclusive, were 34,726,350 pounds against 59,406,387 pounds for the corresponding period last year. The receipts from January 1, 1920, to September 2, 1920, inclusive, were 231,771,577 pounds against 326,821,391 pounds for the like period last year.

Fear No Car Shortage

The management of the Great Northern railroad does not look for any car shortage in that system when it comes to crop movement. It is prepared to handle 11,000,000 bushels of grain this Fall.

PROFITEERS FINDING IT HARD TO BORROW

"The profiteer is finding it hard to borrow," it was stated by Chicago Vice-President Fenton of the National Bank of the Republic. His day is passing. The price of clothing is lowering and foodstuffs prices are decreasing in price. Our abundant crops promise a abundance of food this Winter at moderate prices.

"That prices of commodities of every kind are decreasing gradually is a good sign. It does not disturb the credit system as a sudden drop would do. I look for a careful working out of our credit needs and final restoration of normal conditions through financial life throughout the land to a normal level."

U. S. Treasury Receipts

Ordinary United States Treasury receipts in August amounted to $626,745,852, against $268,538,839 for August, 1919, and for the fiscal year to date they amounted to $626,745,852, against $498,329,523 for a like period of last year. Ordinary expenses of August were $447,871,064, against $266,797,744 for August, 1919, and for the fiscal year to date total $764,672,901, against $1,742,071,214.

FIRM TONE TO MARKET HERE

Boston Prices Rule Higher During the Forenoon; Curb Starts Weak, But Improves

At the opening about half of the issues which "came out" in Boston were up and most of the remainder were unchanged. There were but few losses off to the opening. The market had a good tone all the morning and was fairly active. Copper and motor issues were in demand, particularly a number being up a point or more. Oil and rail stocks were neglected. Among stocks to advance from one to more than two points were Abitibi, Calumet & Arizona, U. S. Smelting, St. Mary's Land, Island Creek, Old Dominion, Swift & Co., and Swift International. Abitibi, Swift & Co. advanced the most, being up nearly three at the morning highest.

Smaller gains were made by American Telephone, Massachusetts Gas, New Haven, Quincy, North Butte, Davis Daly, Bigheart, Waldorf and Ventura.

Mining and Greenfield Tap were off a point each, while smaller losses were registered by Boston & Maine and Shawmut Steamship.

CURB OPENED WEAK.

The Curb was weak at the opening but soon showed improvement. Arizona Tip Top was the early feature, and with Eureka was the two most active. Little Kingdom began with a gain, and among weak stocks at the opening were Top, Bagdad, Mutual, Jerome Verde and Silver Reef. Trading was of fair volume.

At the end of an hour Tip Top was up 6 cents at 31 cents, Eureka 1 cent at 32 cents, Boston & Montana 3 cents at 26 cents and Little Kingdom 5 cents at 35 cents. Among recessions were Mutual 2 cents at 35 cents, and Madonna ¼ at 2¾.

CONSERVE GASOLINE, SAYS STANDARD OIL

This country is consuming gasoline faster than it is producing it and a shortage is inevitable unless there is conservation, according to Standard Oil authorities. The lamp which is published by Standard Oil of New Jersey, says:

"The United States is the only country that has such high-powered, heavy motor cars. It is time that we stopped it. The man who gets but eight miles on a gallon of gasoline in order to have a reserve power for occasional use that will enable him to push his car along at 60 to 75 miles an hour is an offender against the public good.

"If we do not mend our way and stop the profligate use of this valuable fuel we must inevitably run into a serious shortage. The oil industry and automobile manufacturers will do their part, but the man who will decide is the car user. If he wants gasoline a few cents less, now he should demand an economical motor. It is the public that will suffer if the supply becomes acute, and it is the public that can provide the remedy."

BUMPER WHEAT CROP HARVESTED IN CANADA

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 7.—With the harvest ending throughout Canada, estimates of the total wheat crop of the Dominion, the Agricultural Department of the Dominion government put the figure at 262,233,000 bushels. Last year's crop, according to final estimates was 193,260,000 bushels. W. A. Black of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, a crop authority, estimates a yield of from 225,000,000 to 250,000,000 bushels.

If the government estimate is correct the harvest will mean $468,353,340 in the pockets of Canadian farmers if last year's prices are maintained. The final price last year was $2.15, but under its participation certificates system, the wheat board forecasts only the growers thirty cents a bushel additional as excess profits, and fix a flat price of $2.45 cents a bushel more.

Though in the older communities the acreage in wheat was less than last year, much new acreage was brought into cultivation by the Canadian National Railways' Transcontinental line, where settlement is proceeding. Government authorities minimize the effect of rust in the prairie provinces.

Gold Balance Favors U. S.

Although this country holds the bulk of the world's gold supply, yellow metal continues to come in. Imports still exceed exports. For the ten days ending August 20 imports aggregated $2,113,000, against exports of $1,766,000. Silver imports aggregated $1,244,000 and exports $426,753.

Corporation Earnings

For the year ended June 30, 1920, the General Petroleum Corporation showed surplus after charges and taxes of $2,449,256, which is equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $4.82 a share on the 429,900 common, against $2,448,578 or $12.81 a share on 317,400 shares for the preceding year.

Surplus after charges, taxes and depreciation reported by the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. for the year ended June 30 was $2,000,857, equivalent to $3.57 a share on $24,000,000 common stock. This compares with $1,-929,000 reported for the year ended June 30, 1919, when the common stock amounted to $21,020,000.

The Lucey Manufacturing Co. reports that for the year ended June 30 net profits were $736,008.

While the July gross of the Chicago Great Western increased only $122,016, the net earnings showed a gain of $1,000,000, according to the road's statement. The gross for the year ending June 30, 1919, was $19,000,000, and for the year ending 1919 period.

The Illinois Traction System for the six months ended June 30, 1920, surplus after charges was $1,000,000, which is equal to 5.6 cents a share ($10 par) on the 1,500,000 shares.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Sept. 7.—The cotton market had an excited and very strong opening, with prices 70 to 150 points higher. The upturn was based on remarkably strong Liverpool cables, unconfirmed reports that the British coal strike had been settled and expectation of a bullish ginning report tomorrow. Liverpool was a very heavy buyer at the opening and the active months of the first of twenty minutes the market was practically and about 50 points down from the highest. Opening prices were: October, 27.00; November, 26.00 bid; December, 25.65; January, 24.80; March, 24.10; May, 24.20.

New York Sub-Treasury Gain

New York, Sept. 7.—The sub-treasury gained $228,000 from the banks on Saturday, making the cash net loss Friday to $131,000.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Sept. 7.—Wheat opened 5c to 11c higher. Corn started 1c to 2c higher and oats unchanged to 1c higher. Provisions were slightly higher. NEW SCHOOL FOR SOMERVILLE

Working Children Between Ages of 14 and 16 Years Compelled to Attend

With the opening of the public schools of Somerville tomorrow will come the inauguration of the Continuation School, which is to be established in rooms in the basement of the Somerville High School and which, under the law, must be attended four hours a week by every child, between fourteen and sixteen years of age, who is employed in Somerville.

Every W. Ireland will be the director of the new school. It is estimated that 200 children will attend the school one afternoon each week. The assignes will be held from 1 to 5 on every week day but Saturday. In addition to Ireland three teachers have been elected for the work. They are Miss Estelle Crowe, teacher of the girls; Kelly S. Boland, teacher of academic studies for boys, and Lawrence E. Landahl, teacher of prevocational subjects for boys.

Attendance at the senior high school is expected to be the largest for some years, and the attendance at the four junior high schools is also expected to be greater than last year, necessitating arrangements for a greater number of afternoon classes.

Overcrowding in the elementary schools in the East Somerville section is likely to continue this year, and may be even greater than last year. Conditions in other sections of the city are expected to be comfortable, though it is not likely there will be many vacant seats. Owing to lack of room, kindergartens in the Bingham School will not be open for the present.

10,000 SEE TWO FLIERS KILLED

Service Airmen in Fatal Tail Spin While Entertaining Tennis Crowds

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Swooping down over the heads of 10,000 spectators at the national singles championship tennis matches here in a daring tail spin that left the crowd gasping, a naval airplane crashed into a field within a short distance of the grandstand, killing both of its occupants.

The men killed were Lieutenant Grear, an officer of the naval detachment at Mitchel Field, L. I., and Sergeant Saxe of the army air service. Both had been taking photographs of the players and the crowd and distracting the attention of the spectators with their daring manoeuvres.

The airplane was within 700 feet of the ground when its nose was tilted in a tail spin. The crash came so suddenly, there was no time for panic. The machine plunged downward with such force that it was partly buried in the ground and its wings had crumpled and folded upon themselves.

Lieutenant Grear was killed instantly. Sergeant Saxe was rushed to a hospital, but died before the ambulance reached there. The machine was so completely wrecked that no one could hazard a guess as to the cause of the fatal plunge.

Canada's Grain Outlook

According to reports to Clement, Curtiss & Co. of Chicago the three provinces of Northwest Canada will harvest 264,000,000 bushels of wheat this year, or 100,000,000 more than last year. The five-year average is 267,000,000 bushels. The forecast for oats is 545,000,000, against 256,000,000 last year and a five-year average of 249,000,000.

FILM THRILLER AT OPERA HOUSE

If you would be "wised up" to a thriller; if you would see New York in its secret places in the stillness of night, and if you would study the supreme marvel of what human eyes can express, you will find yourself at the Boston Opera House this week, where "While New York Sleeps" is the attraction.

There are three shows in one, and in each a melodramatic episode more clutching than its predecessor. In the first, which is laid in the suburbs, where wealth and love apparently abound, the real heroine of the three-fold drama appears in the person of Miss Estelle Taylor, as "the wife" who is given more emotional behavior to enact than has fallen to the lot of a movie actress for a season at least.

Miss Taylor, as the virtuous wife in the first tragedy, as the "vamp" in the second, and as the "other girl" in the third, acted completely with as large an audience as has been seated in the Opera House since the days of the original operatic successes. Miss Taylor vamps exactly as a New York vamp is reported to have her victims to their doom. The scene of her blackmail and fake suicide should be studied by many a "city gentleman" who must be taught the wiley ways of women on the great White Way.

Perhaps the picture which will remain longest in the minds of those who see "While New York Sleeps" is that of the gaudy attic, played by Mary MacDermott in the last episode, who sits motionless through the entire horrible panorama enacted before his eyes. With those wonderful orbs, however, he tells an eloquent story, and finally makes the "bulls" understand.

PARK THEATRE—Charles Ray in one of his quiet pictures, "The Girl," was seen yesterday, and will be shown today at the Park Theatre. "Red Hot Dollars" (which this well known and well liked star is featured, is the story of a boy and girl and the means of bringing together two life-long enemies. Gladys George is his leading lady.

Wednesday and Thursday Enid Bennett in "The Woman in the Suit Case" will be the feature. In this picture Miss Bennett is seen at her best in the role of a boarding school miss.

Douglas MacLean and Doris May in "What's Your Husband Doing?" will be the feature on Friday and Saturday.

BROADWAY THEATRE — The Broadway Theatre management greeted its capacity crowds of holiday patrons with an all new change of program yesterday, and the same bill will be repeated today and tomorrow, following the announced policy of running continuously from 1:30 to 5 and from 6:30 to 11 p. m. The vaudeville features for the first half of the week include Daly and Berlow in a striking display of whirlwind dancing, Marie Stoddard in a very clever skit, "The Lady of the Early," Clinton and Harvey, known as "Regular Fellers," in up-to-date singing and dancing, and Four Original Dancers, truly a "de luxe" quartet. The first three days of the week will feature photoplay is Cecil B. DeMille's "Why Change Your Wife?" with a notable cast headed by Gloria Swanson and Thomas Meighan.

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQUARE—One of the pathetic situations in the film, "The Family Honor," which was shown at Gordon's Cambridge Central Square theatre last night, is the story of which a youth in his teens loses all of his money in a gambling den, secretly pay the money of his employer. Not only does he lose his own money, but some entrusted to him by his employer.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—The holiday crowds which visited Loew's Orpheum Theatre yesterday were most enthusiastic in their praise of the entertainment offered, comprising vaudeville and topline photoplay features. Mary Maclaren and the Laurel Four in the Canfor and Yates presentation of artistic and modern studies in monotone created a favorable impression. Their clear voices, with a wide range of tone, afford one of the most delightful treats of the program. Weir and Crest, a comedy singing and chattering act with humorous gags and song, kept the audience roaring with laughter.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE—Yesterday's holiday crowds at the Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester, were keenly appreciative of the good things offered by the management and the four acts of vaudeville were exceptionally entertaining. The singing and dancing acts were smart and clever.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA THEATRE—Yesterday was a banner day for Loew's Columbia Theatre, being the first holiday since the inauguration of the new policy, and capacity audiences attended the offering of five sterling acts of vaudeville, and a liberal amount of singing. Dancing and comedy was scattered throughout the program.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA—Belief that the war is again in full blast was broadly intimated in the numerous entertainments when Mary Pickford as Mavis Hawn and a fusillade of shots at a tree in "Heap O' the Hills," adapted from the story by John Fox, Jr., her latest picture which was seen last evening at Gordon's Olympia Theatre, street.

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH THEATRE—The long awaited and much heralded Annette Kellerman production "What Every Woman Loves," a First National attraction, made its appearance yesterday at Gordon's Old South Theatre. Miss Kellerman in her dazzling Venus' first modern story and is entirely different from anything she has ever done. Bernard McConville, who has written for Mary Pickford, Norma Talmadge and other well-known stars made this story to measure for the maritime luminary, that displays her aquatic talents extraordinary and shows her as a twentieth century athletic girl.

FARMER SHOT DEAD BY HIS OWN GUN

We Know What We Want and How to Get It

The papers a day or two ago carried news of moment to those who are interested in the cost of living in America.

It is reported here that the Revere Sugar Refining Company is holding 20,000 tons of sugar from the market because it is unwilling to break the price of sugar below 20 cents a pound! This company is entirely owned by the United Fruit Company, the steamship concern which has a monopoly of the coastal fruit trade, especially between the United States and West India Islands. It is the same company which has practiced the throwing of whole great cargoes of fruit overboard, rather than sell it to the people at reduced prices or to give it to the poor.

It is also reported here that the Federal Grand Jury have taken this case into consideration, while United States Senator Calder, sitting in Boston on a Senate investigating committee, publicly warns coal people to take care not to go too far in their extortion lest the arm of the National Government descend upon them.

The news from New York is that the Federal Government has caused to be indicted some fifty or so steamship companies from entering into conspiracy to raise freight rates, which increased the cost of living by four or five times the amount of the rates.

It is all to laugh! An indictment against these big profiteers for what they steal from the public is passing the state of a joke. Think of indicting a company, a soulless, fleshless, conscienceless, heartless corporation, the mere figment of a lawyer's mind, a legal fiction without parents or relatives to be ashamed of it, without a past, nor hope or fear of a future world.

What happens to it when it is indicted? If it is found guilty generally a judge who is kind hearted to a corporation that has no nerves with which to feel pain and no pride with which to feel shame, a judge who would be stern with a flesh and blood man, fines it gently, and it promptly passes the fine on to the people by charging it up to increased expenses to be paid for by the increased charge for the services it renders.

Sixteen thousand men made themselves millionaires out of the war. All these great profits have been added to the cost of living. They mostly come from special privilege and some special advantage which is unnatural and wrong. We have tried for twenty-five years to curb this by the threat of the criminal law and legal denunciations of trusts and monopolies and unreasonably high prices.

Thoughtful men know why it failed. They know that the criminal law is helpless, because with great success in stealing comes the possession of money, and with possession of money comes power, and the machinery of the criminal law cannot withstand the power of money.

What big profiteer has gone to jail in this country? And yet think of the two little Russian children, who dared to distribute pitiful little circulars protesting against our Government entering upon an unconstitutional war against their people at home, who were given ten years in State's prison, and other men, against whose character the world acknowledges there is no blemish, pining in jail for having honest convictions, and having the courage to express them.

This is a great country. We are a great democracy. We know what we want and we know how to get it. We want a great high cost of living. We want as many millionaires who have made their millions by extortion as we can get. We want right always on the scaffold and wrong always on the throne!

Roosevelt Still Persists in League of Peace Folly

Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, speaking in Maine, persists in the folly of assuming, without evidence, because the evidence is all against him, that the League of Nations will tend to promote peace.

The evidence is so overwhelming against the proposition that the League of Nations, as now constituted, will tend to promote peace, that it really is extraordinary to hear men of character harping on that chord. Present European conditions show beyond doubt that such a league tends to provoke war, and occasions for war in which America would be involved if we were in the league.

It would be perfectly safe for the opponents of the League of Nations to agree to let the advocates of the league win their case if they could show, not that it will promote peace, but that it WILL NOT PROMOTE MORE WARS.

The American suggests that wherever the opponents of the League of Nations can secure a joint debate with the advocates of the league they ought to do it in order to prevent the advocates of the league from dealing so much in fanciful pictures as unlike the League of Nations as the Prince of Peace is unlike the God of War.

Religion and Politics

The average American would have believed that the great alchemy of the war had amalgamated all our peoples so that in politics no man would think of the religion or racial descent of another man.

The fact that men of all races and all religions contributed to the winning of our Revolutionary War and our independence, that men of all races and all religions had contributed to the second war against Great Britain for the freedom of the seas, the fact that men of all races and religions had united to save the Union in the great Civil War, has long established the great fact that religious and racial distinction in American politics is utterly un-American and despised by all true Americans.

But now after the amalgamating process of the last war it is almost unbelievable that we should find even one man discriminating against another who is a candidate for office on account of his racial descent or his religion.

But we are told that a few men organized under the banners of the old A. P. A. are attempting to make trouble for Congressman Walsh of the cape district. As conforming Republicans go, Mr. Walsh has been a very good congressman—far better than any of the A. P. A.'s would be likely to select.

Welcome Maj.-Gen. Shanks

It is not in the old sense in which "the King is dead, long live the King," used to be shouted by the French people, in the days when their ignorance permitted them to believe that kings reigned by divine right, that we suggest to the community that it welcome and aid Major-General David C. Shanks with the cordiality which belongs to his office.

We should make the effort the greater because we so much regret the departure of General Edwards. It is not General Shank's fault that he supersedes General Edwards.

More Truth Than Poetry

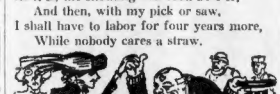
The Horny-Handed S. of T.

By S. E. KISER.

IN a general way I am far from gay,
For there's little to make me glad;
I often sigh for the things that I
Could use, but never have had.
Between campaigns I must hump for gains
That always are doubly earned,
While the rich and great let me work and wait,,
And never are much concerned.
But in each four years there is one great year
In which I have cause to gloat;
To the candidate there is naught so dear,
It appears, as the Labor Vote.

I MUST work and sweat when the days are wet,
I work when the skies are fair;
If I'm ever too sick to handle the pick
There are few who have time to care.
There are long, lean years when it oft appears
That I haven't a friend on earth,
When I have to strive to remain alive,
And must daily reduce my girth.
But in each four years there is one that brings
Me out of my dismal straits,
When I get a taste of the world's good things
As the pet of the candidates.

THE women, it seems, are inventing schemes
To grab the power that's mine,
But I'm hoping still that they never will,
Though I grant they may be divine,
If I had any choice we would soon rejoice
With elections in Spring and Fall,
For then, perhaps, I should not relapse
Into sorry neglect at all.
As it is, the shouting will soon be o'er,
And then, with my pick or saw,
I shall have to labor for four years more,
While nobody cares a straw.



AS THINGS GO

A man may be as happy as the day is long and still not be worth his weight in potatoes.

PETS OF THE PROPAGANDIST

People who are carried away by their emotions may generally be classed among the lightweights.

Letters to the Editor

The Only Means

Editor Boston American:

In view of fact that there are some who think Mayor MacSwiney's noble sacrifice puts him in the category of a suicide, here is a comparison: A man on a bridge, seeing a fast approaching train and no means of escape except the river, jumps and is drowned. His intention was to save his life. He took the only means of doing so, just as that Patriot MacSwiney is doing today. Apart from the food and treatment, two years in an English prison would surely mean death to a man whose soul yearns for liberty and freedom for his native land. He has taken the only means to avoid a felon's death. His is the spirit that changed this land from a British colony to the greatest nation on the earth today. Is there no kindred spirit here who has the will and power to come to his rescue and have his life spared, so that he may help to guide the destinies of the young Republic?

Reads Editorials

Editor Boston American:

I am a woman who reads but little, as I have to work from six a. m. to seven p. m., daily. I always manage to read your editorials, letters to the editor, and would not miss the Brisbane news, come what would. I could not see how anybody could be so narrow, as one who signs himself "An Ex-Job," saying that Mr. Tague is thrown down at nearly every rally by his opponents. He reminds me of a neighbor who married a woman who would not be worthy of the name wife for any real man. He could not see that she was not as good as any woman of today.

I think the Irish are first, last and all the time American, and if Mr. Tague was fit for the office, he would be elected, I am quite sure. Long live the Hearst papers, we certainly need them today.

Stars and Stripes

There's no better exercise than walking, but it's pleasanter when voluntary.

In selling the stockyards to Prince & Co., the packers aren't taking chances of letting them get out of their financial family. It is undoubtedly a famous victory for the people—not.

"The American point of view is that a mandatory is not privileged to exploit for its own benefit the raw materials produced in mandate territory." Fine; but just how would you enforce it?

HERE AM I.
A PEACEFUL citizen.
WHO HAS no quarrel.
WITH ANYBODY,
EXCEPT HIMSELF.
FOR WHAT he does.
THAT HE shouldn't do.
AND DOESN'T do.
THAT HE should do.
AND PAYS his way.
AND ASKS no thing.
HE SHOULDN'T have.
AND FINDS himself.
IN A stricken town.
CALLED NEW York.
WITH MILES of streets.
HE MUST traverse
IF NIGHT should come.
AND HE be home.
AND TAXI cabs.
AND PRIVATE cars.
AND AUTO trucks.
TO TAKE the place.
OF IDLE cars.
BUT NONE for him.
FOR WHERE he is.
HE NEEDS must fight.
TO MAKE his way.
ABOARD OF one.
AND COMES a car.
A PLAIN street car.

ALL COVERED up.
WITH IRON screen.
AND BEARING cops.
AT EITHER end.
AND HE crawls in.
THE WHICH am I.
IN DEADLY fear.
THAT HE'LL be beaned.
WITH SOME loose rock.
BUT ISN'T beaned.
AND CROUCHES there.
UPON HIS seat.
AND JUMPS a foot.
WHEN SOME big truck.
BACK FIRES.
AS IT passes by.
AND TRIES to smile.
AS DOES the cop.
BUT JUST looks sick.
AND HOURS later.
GETS BACK home.
AND SITS him down.
AND DREAMS.
OF SOME far distant day.
WHEN PEACEFUL men.
MAY GO about.
WITH PEACEFUL mien.
AND HAVE no fear.
OF BEING beaned.

I THANK you.

ICE THEORY OF FLOOD HAS A BASIS

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Isn't it true that the regions about the rivers Nile, Tigris and Euphrates (where man seems to have first attained civilization) were not covered with ice during the glacial period, as was the northern portions of Europe If this is true, isn't it reasonable to assume that the deluge mentioned in mythology as well as the Bible was really an inundation in those regions caused by the melting of vast quantities of ice toward the north, producing water in such quantities as to inundate perhaps the whole of the earth which wasn't frozen? Is this theory plausible, or would it conflict with geological revelations?

"AN AMATEUR SCIENTIST."

YOUR idea is by no means a new one, but it is of fascinating and undying interest, and I do not think that it is in conflict with any revelation of geology, or inconsistent with the physical laws governing terrestrial phenomena. I believe that the Bible descriptions of a great, and apparently universal, flood and the many other traditions relating to such an occurrence are based upon prehistoric facts, and that we owe it to our intelligence to make every possible effort to uncover those facts in order that the actual truth may take the place of hazy legends and of accounts based upon local appearances and imaginary interpretations.

Fitting the Theory

There are, of course, difficulties of detail to be overcome in fitting such a theory to the region supposed to have been specially affected.

On the charts prepared by geologists showing the southern limits of the completely glaciated area in the Old World, the line nowhere extends as far south as the Black and Caspian seas, but there were outlying, or large local, glaciated areas reaching far around the Caucasus and the Armenian mountains, and these, particularly the latter, would affect the Mesopotamian lowlands.

A Difficulty

One difficulty is that of accounting for the suddenness with which the ice would have to be melted in order to create a flood. But this difficulty disappears, or is greatly diminished, when one reflects that, after all, neither the Bible account nor the other traditions of the deluge imply an impossibly rapid rate of melting of the vast body of ice on the mountains. "Forty days and forty nights" the rain continued, says Genesis, and the flood of waters gradually rose higher until the hills were covered.

The wide distribution of traditions about the flood over both the Old and the New World might be regarded as an indication that there were great inundations, disastrous to man in both hemispheres, about the close of glacial times.

GIVE THE CHILDREN A CHANCE

This is the time for travel and there are certain experiences which you should permit your children to have to make them familiar with them.

It is not just to a child, for instance, to let it grow up without knowing anything about the inside of a Pullman car.

Much embarrassment has been caused young men and young women by the ignorance they have had to display regarding sleeping cars.

Children should be taken to large hotels to know how to conduct themselves in such places.

And children should be given as much as their parents' income will allow for the purpose of doing the things necessary in associating with persons of good breeding so that they may know the proper ways of doing things, as well as the influence which contact with well bred persons will give in refinement.

It is an easy matter for a young person to do some little thing which is really big in its announcement to others that there is no experience or environment back of it.

Do you want your child to be so handicapped? Of course you don't.

Then see that your child has proper training along cultural lines.

HAPPINESS HURT WITH TOO MUCH FAMILY

By Beatrice Fairfax

THIS has been "husband's day." At least that's the record of my mailbag. Letter after letter has tumbled out from dear, bewildered young men who aren't making much of a go of marriage.

One of them is being tagged about by a mother-in-law who reads as if an alienist ought to see her. She forced herself along on the honeymoon. She wouldn't stand for the house which the young husband had bought for his bride. Not only did she insist on living with her "children," but she also made a stand for choosing the abode where she'd make them miserable. She opens the groom's letters. She is caught spying through keyholes. She directs the modus operandi of the household, from choosing the dinner menu to insisting on getting hubby's pay envelope and selecting his new overcoat and his wife's dresses.

Call a Doctor

Dear me! The poor deluded old woman seems under the impression that she is omnipotent. I wonder why the young husband doesn't call in a doctor—or the law—or move out, bag and baggage and young wife. There is such a thing in the world as taking a stand.

The true mother craves happiness for the child who is her immortality. She does not spend her time depriving her child of any possible chance of happiness. So much is sure.

Therefore, the interfering mother who is driving this young husband to distraction doesn't deserve the consideration fine folk almost inevitably offer to motherhood. What she is inviting and ought to get is the summary treatment due to a cantankerous, interfering old woman who needs a strong hand to discipline her.

Common Sense

A little cold-blooded common sense applied to the "too much family" problem is very likely to solve it. Sentiment and weak fear of unpleasantness encourages the troublemakers to go right on with their destructive work.

A man and his wife are partners. They form a close corporation—a unit. Why not make that unity more important than the demands or interferences or difficult standards of folk who class themselves as outsiders the minute they take unfair advantages of their rights as "family"?

Funny, Serious, Which Are You?

By Damon Runyon

I WAS talking yesterday to one of the great editorial writers of the country, and he made a remark that set me thinking.

"I was born without much humor in my system," he said. "So I've had to be solemn all my life. I've been selling solemnity to the public for many years now at a good price. The public wants solemnity."

Some weeks ago I met Ray Long, editor of the various Hearst magazines, in Chicago, and he said:

"I'm looking for humorous stuff for our publications. The public wants humor, and I'll pay a good price for it."

I started out to canvass a little further.

What does the public want?

Here were two successful editors with two different viewpoints. Both think they have the answer. I thought I would try another editor, so I dropped in to see Bob Davis, of the Munsey magazines, who endeavors to keep his editorial finger on the public's reading pulse at all times.

"The public wants humor just now," said Mr. Davis, emphatically. "It is tired of serious things. It must have humor."

This made it two to one in favor of humor, so I went home to ask my wife, who buys newspapers and magazines. I have no little confidence in my wife's judgment on some subjects.

"If people had to be either solemn or humorous all the time," she said, "I think most of the people I know would rather be serious. I'm sure I would. It would be less tiresome."
